Ontario Man and Daughter Electrocuted

DIE AS FLAG POLE FALLS ON POWER WIRE

Had Been Erecting Standard In Front of Home: Both Instantly Killed.

MOTHER SEES TRAGEDY

Willis Duffner, 49, Daughter Althea, 17, Meet Death In Freak Accident.

What was intended to be a Sunday act of patriotism caused the electrocution about 4 p. m. yesterday of Willis Duffner, 49, and his 17-year-old daughter, Aletha Joyce, when a metal flagpole they were erecting in their front yard in Ontario came in contact with a high tension wire

Mrs. Duffner, confined to an upstairs bedroom by illness, saw her husband and daughter killed. Harold Walker, 7, a neighbor boy, was the only other witness to the tragedy.

Both Duffner and his daughter were believed to have been dead when neighbors, summoned by the child's screams, found the two lying on their backs beside the pole which still remained in contact with the wire. Duffner's right arm, which apparently had been wrapped around the pipe, was burned off and his entire right side was seared by the 2300 volts the wire carried. His clothing was partially burned off.

The girl's body bore marks only on her temple, hand and toe, and her clothing was only slightly burned. The Walker boy said he believed she was bracing the pole as her father sought to move it.

Officers believe the pole either became top-heavy, or was swayed by the wind. Grass near its base was seared for several feet around, they said

Herman Marshall, a neighbor, and Attorney James Will, who was visiting at the Marshall home, about 300 yards distant, with Jack Elliott and other Ontario residents succeeded in lassoing the bodies, which were in contact with each other and pulled them away from the pole. The girl was rushed to Mansfield General hospital but she was dead upon arrival, and Acting Coroner Blake Kohler said she (Continued on Page 14, Col. 5.)

'Perfumed Bandit' Confesses Three Hold-Ups In City

Three hold-ups staged in Mansfield a week ago had been solved today, police said, after Raymond L Bond, 31, known as the "perfumed bandit," confessed in Canton that he was responsible for the one-man crime wave April 10 and 11 in the city.

Taken to Canton Sunday by Detective Lee Remy and Oscar Krupp, two of the Mansfield robbery victims identified Bond, alias Raymond G. Clayberger, but it wasn't necessary, for he had already confessed the hold-ups here. He was captured in his Canton rooming house last week after staging a bus hold-up in that city.

Bond was to be taken to Akron today to face a robbery charge, the Mansfield detectives learned, and there was little chance that he will be released to authorities (Continued on Page 3, Col. 5)

HONOR HITLER

Nazis Ordered To Display Flags On Birthday.

LONDON —(AP)— The Berlin radio reported today that Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels had ordered a general display of the German flag throughout the reich tomorrow in honor of Adolf Hitler's 54th birthday, but there was no indication any organized celebration had been planned for the occasion.

Hitler usually makes a speech on his birthday, but he has skipped several Nazi anniversaries recently without a public utterance.

Overseas Convoy? No, They're Great Lakes Ore Carriers

Steaming past Chicago to steel mills at the foot of Lake Michigan, these six ore carriers are the first of the huge fleet which this year must beat all records of lake shipping to keep up production of tanks, guns shells and armor plate. With their vital ore cargo, the carriers are as important as any overseas convoy as they ply the waters from Lake Superior to lower lake ports.

LOOK TO LITTLE BUYERS TO PUSH BOND DRIVE ON

Their Purchases Will Decide Success of Campaign, Says Co-Chairman.

A $68,000 sale of small denomination E bonds over the week-end moved the second War Loan drive in Richland county ahead to a total subscription of $3,940,561.45 today.

Highly pleased with the response of the small investors, H G. Brunner, co-chairman of the drive, nevertheless warned that it would take a lot more purchases of $25, $50 and $100 bonds to make the drive a success.

Other non-bank sales amounted to $27,991.75 making a total of $2,760,061 45 subscribed by these sources to date in the drive Total bank sales came to $1,180,500 today with the addition of $48,000 over the week-end

Meanwhile today the Women's division of the drive made an appeal to the small investors to help with "outfitting the outfit." A display sponsored by the women's division has been set up in the Ohio Fuel Gas company window on Park avenue west

HE'S ASHAMED

Says Argentines Send Tokyo Daily Report on U. S.

NEW YORK—(INS)—"Ashamed" of Argentina's neutrality, a former Argentine consular attache in Tokyo today announced that "from now on" he would work for the defeat of the Axis.

He is Raymond Lavalle, who arrived in the United States from the Japanese capital two weeks ago.

Lavalle said he resigned his Tokyo post when he found that the Japanese embassy in Buenos Aires is supplying Nippon with daily reports on United States war production—at the rate of 60 cables a day.

Lavalle said he "never saw such panic" as he witnessed a year ago yesterday when Maj. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's planes bombed Tokyo.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—(INS)—Postcards bearing demands that the war labor board act on their wage case within three days are being distributed today to 20,000 Buffalo Curtiss-Wright employes by officials of the International Association of Machinists, AFL.

The cards, which carry spaces for singnatures of the workers, also protest the virtual freeze of wages and jobs by the federal government. The workers are urged to mail them to WLB Chairman William H. Davis.

SEE PROGRESS ON PAY-GO BILL

Legislators Still Disagree Over 'Forgiveness' But Hope To Reach Compromise.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —Senior members of the house ways and means committee, reporting progress but no agreement carry their negotiations for a compromise pay-as-you-go tax plan back to the house leadership today with the issue of "forgiveness" still their stumbling block.

After week-end conferences, the ranking Democratic and Republican committee members scheduled a session with Speaker Rayburn, Majority Leader McCormack and Rep. Martin, Republican minority leader.

Republicans, who originally backed the Ruml plan, were understood to be demanding at least 50 per cent forgiveness of 1942 tax liabilities in whatever compromise is reached. This raised a political problem for the Democrats who declared themselves opposed to any tax forgiveness "on principle" dur- (Continued on Page 3, Col. 3)

'E' DATE SET

Hughes-Keenan Award Ceremony To Be Staged May 7.

First Army-Navy "E" award to a Mansfield plant will be made to the Hughes-Keenan company May 7, W. E. Post, vice president and general manager, said today.

After consulting with Alvin L. Kreig of the Cleveland Ordnance district, plant officials announced the date of the presentation of the award. Plans for the celebration are as yet incomplete and will be announced later.

Presentation of the Army-Navy "E" flag and awarding of lapel buttons to all the 180 employes will be made at the plant. If weather permits, the ceremonies will be held outside, Post said.

City's First Carload Of Tin Cans Off To Fight In War

Mansfield's first carload of salvaged tin cans was scheduled to leave the city today for Pittsburgh where the cans will be processed to remove the tin coating for use in war industries.

The shipment, totaling 18 tons, represented collections made last week in the first three wards. The cans were loaded at the Malo Brothers junk yard on Bowman street.

Collections were started today in the Fourth ward, Garbage Superintendent L. L. Linham said, and the rest of the city will be covered this week unless the weather interferes. Workers plan to go to the Fifth ward Wednesday and then to the Sixth ward Friday.

Mayor W. J. Locke told Linham that it probably would be necessary to go back over the wards that have been covered to pick up cans that were missed last week.

Boy Scouts will gather cans in the Mansfield suburban districts next Saturday, calling at homes in Lincoln Heights, East Mansfield, South Boulevards, Garden Acres, and other sections of Madison township outside the city.

Linham, who is in charge of the city collections, urged housewives not to put light bulbs, bottles, and other non-usable articles in the boxes with tin cans. Sorting the cans takes time and delays calls at other homes, he said. Only tin-coated containers from which the labels and ends have been removed are valuable.

GETS 1ST WORD OF SON, MISSING SINCE BATAAN

Mother Told John Robinette's a Prisoner; Hope Others Are Safe Increases.

First word concerning the fate of a Mansfield soldier, member of a tank corps that took part in the historic defense of Bataan before the little army of the Philippines fell to the Japanese last year spurred hope among several families here today that other members of the same battalion may be prisoners of the enemy rather than casualties of World War II

Word was received today by Mrs. Aceline Robinette, of west of Mansfield that her son, Pvt. John E. Robinette, is held prisoner by the Japanese in the Philippines.

Robinette with five others from the city were members of a tank corps which made history in defense of the peninsula under Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who since has been made commander-in-chief of the Allied Nations forces in the southwest Pacific.

OPA Bans Extra Gas For Summer Home Residents

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The Office of Price Administration today banned extra gasoline rations for summer commuters in the eastern shortage area.

The new gasoline orders, effective next Saturday, apply to both automobiles and pleasure boats in the eastern area

They virtually eliminate pleasure motor boating and propably will result in closing of thousands of summer homes along the eastern seaboard.

OPA said that "no vacation and summer hotel travel can be encouraged while the rubber and gasoline shortages are making it necessary to curtail severely many types of passenger car use, including driving in many occupations."

The Public Roads administration meanwhile revealed the failure of the pleasure driving honor system. Its statistics showed that Sunday traffic declined enormously after Jan. 7 when the first ban on pleasure driving was imposed, but rose to former levels under the honor system in March.

SEN. AUSTIN HITS FREEZE AS COERCIVE

Says Tying of 27,000,000 To Jobs To Swell Call For Service Law.

ORDER EXPLAINED

WMC Director Declares Ruling Bolsters President's Hold-Line Command.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON - Twenty-seven million Americans now employed in essential work are virtually frozen in their jobs as a result of a war manpower commission edict forbidding them to switch to higher-paying jobs with new employers on pain of fine or imprisonment.

The decree, issued from President Roosevelt, was assailed as "coercive" by Senator Austin (R., Vt.), co-author of the national service bill.

Austin predicted it would increase public sentiment for legislation to draft men and women wherever they are needed in the war effort.

McNutt gave reporters this explanation: "We've got a war on."

The nation's remaining 25,000,000 civilian workers—all those in non-essential activities—were left free to move at will to other non-essential employers or to essential employers offering them higher wages or salaries

Robert C. Goodwin, regional WMC director at Cleveland, explained the regulations were designed to carry out that part of President Roosevelt's order stabilizing wages, prices and employment and to stop transfers at higher wages unless the shift is in the best interest of the war program.

Goodwin said area WMC committees had been requested to consider amendments to their local stabilization plants to conform to the new regulations.

Restrictions on hiring and controls of inter-area migration are covered by the regional plan, which also sets up valid reasons for job transfers and outlines appeal procedures

Five general reasons for job transfers are listed as valid under the regional plan, and statements (Continued on Page 14, Col. 8)

FOOD SCARCER

Less Meat, Poultry, Milk Seen By Agriculture Department.

WASHINGTON (INS) A darker food picture today faced the American civilian population, with the agriculture department estimating that food will be even more scarce than was expected several months ago.

Revising its estimate on food supplies, the department disclosed that civilians will have less meat, poultry, milk, dairy products, fruits and vegetables and at the same time, warned consumers that some of the now hard to get foods will remain scarce during the rest of the year.

Some commodities may be available in slightly larger quantities, however, such as canned fruits, vegetables and sugar.

DELAY STRIKE

Akron Transport Workers Call Off Earlier Decision.

AKRON - (U.P.) - The Transport Workers union (CIO) yesterday voted not to call the strike previously scheduled, pending outcome of a regional war labor board hearing with Akron Transportation company officials at Cleveland April 30.

The strike had been authorized for Sunday morning. The union's wage dispute has been certified to the WLB and the three-man panel will hold the hearing in attempt to mediate grievances.

Allies Triumph In Air Battle Over Tunisia

Knock 52 Transports, 16 Fighters Out Of Skies Over Mediterranean Sea In Spectacular Blow; Toll For Full 24 Hours Hits 85.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—Allied aerial squadrons, hammering lethally at the Axis from Enfidaville to Palmero in support of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander's 18th Army group, scored the greatest single air victory of the war in this sector yesterday by destroying 74 enemy aircraft—58 Junkers transports and 16 fighters—off the Tunisian coast.

(A dispatch from Cairo said the transports were laden with enemy personnel and heading northeastward toward Sicily when the trap was sprung. The dispatch did not bring out whether the passengers were Axis troops, which Axis broadcasts have said will stay and fight it out, or noncombatant and technical forces such as might be expected to be removed before the Allied noose tightens further.)

Warhawk and Spitfire fighters engaged 100 enemy transport aircraft and their escort and, in addition to the 74 destroyed, 30 other planes were reported damaged A Cairo communique said nine American planes were lost, but one of the pilots was known to be safe.

This was but one of a series of exploits in which Allied airmen and ground gunners shot down 85 Axis planes during the day and night.

Sardinian, Sicilian and Tunisian targets were heavily attacked.

Flying Fortresses left large fires burning in the freight yards and on an air field at the Sicilian port of Palermo and a communique said that "bombs were seen to burst among enemy fighters that had just landed from an attack on the preceding formation of Fortresses."

United States and South African pilots of the western desert air force hunted across the Sicilian straits until late yesterday afternoon to score the spectacular blow against Marshal Erwin Rommel's aerial shipping facilities.

The huge formation of Junkers, with strong fighter protection, was sighted flying toward Sicily almost at sea-level. Warhawk squadrons dived as a single unit at the lumbering transports while Spitfires engaged the covering Messerschmitts.

Many transports fell into the sea wreathed in flames. Others deliberately crash-landed on Cap Bon, which juts into the Mediterranean 50 miles northwest of Tunis.

READY: Men Who Hit Tokyo From Carriers 'Set To Return'

By DONALD COE
(UP Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE NORTH AFRICAN STRATEGIC AIR FORCE, April 17.—(Delayed)—Eleven of the men who flew Mitchell bombers from aircraft carriers to bomb Tokyo a year ago tomorrow are ready to mark the first anniversary of their flight with their commander, now Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle

Just how and when the event will be celebrated, or for that how many of the 11 will be able to attend, was still undecided late tonight.

Most of the fliers have moved up in rank in the year since they historic flight and the group itself has shifted from Mitchell bombers to Martin Marauders.

Maj. William M. Bower of Ravenna, O., assistant wing operations officer at this base, told me he would like to leave right now to bomb Tokyo again.

"I wonder if we'll try it again—maybe even tomorrow on the anniversary," he said "I'll bet those Japs are sweating a little tonight."

When I entered the concrete-floored tent that serves as Bower's office, he was talking on the telephone with another flier who participated in the Tokyo raid

"And what were you doing a year ago tonight, pal?" he asked over the telephone.

The reply Bower said he hung up, was

"I was sweating, too."

He identified the other 10 members of the flight now in North Africa as Majors Charles Greening, Tacoma, Wash.; Travis Hoover, Riverside, Calif.; and Rodney R. Wilder, Taylor, Tex.; Captains Henry A. Potter, Pierre, S. D.; James M. Packer, Livingston, Tex.; William R. Pound, jr., Alhambra, Calif.; Howard A. Sessler, Arlington, Mass.; Jack Sims, Kalamazoo, Mich.; C. J. Ozuk, Chicago, and T. C. Griffin, Chicago.

ROCKED: Kiska Pounded By 10 More Raids, Allies Bomb Timor

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—American fliers continued to smash at enemy shipping concentrations in the Shortland island area of the Solomons, heavily damaging two cargo vessels and leaving one of them in a sinking conditions, the navy announced today.

(By Associated Press)

Ten more raids on Kiska by American Liberators, Mitchells, Lightnings and Warhawks highlighted today's war reports from the Pacific where the Allies bombed Japanese in the Aleutians, the Solomons, the southwest Pacific area and Burma.

Hits were scored on the Kiska runway and camp, the navy said in its communique yesterday, while six Japanese planes were destroyed and two enemy surface ships were damaged in the Solomons.

In turn, the Japanese struck lightly at Guadalcanal, causing some casualties and minor damage.

An attack by a large formation of Mitchells on Penfoei airdrome in Timor, Dutch East Indies, was the major action reported from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's front, but his airmen continued to pound the Japanese all around the island arc, and bombed a 10,000-ton ship at Kavieng, New Ireland.

RAF pilots bombed Pynbon, targets in the Kaladan river valley, and objectives in Abakan where British troops were reported en- (Continued on Page 3, Col. 4)

THE 2nd WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

EXTRA

Yes Ma'am, it's those EXTRA Dimes that count most now.....

Before very long I hope to be coming to your neighborhood yelling at the top of my voice, "EXTRA! EXTRA! AXIS POWERS DEFEATED!" But right now the only extra that I can think of is the extra dimes that Uncle Sam has asked us to help him borrow. Dimes that buy War Savings Stamps, dimes that soon grow into dollars that will buy War Bonds to furnish the guns and bullets and planes and tanks that guys who are fighting with my brother Bill need to whip the Japs and Hitler. The more dimes we both loan to Uncle Sam for this purpose the sooner Bill and all of his buddies will be back home. I know what I'm talking about because Bill wrote me a long letter about a week ago from somewhere over-there and said that if me and Mom and Pop and Sis would all give 20% of what we earn instead of 10% this war would be over in a jiffy because then he and his buddies wouldn't have to wait in between for supplies. Well, that's good enough for me because my brother Bill ain't never been wrong yet.

MILK BOTTLE HOARDING HIT

Government Officials Believe One-Cent Deposit Rule Will End Practice.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—For many years the milk companies of the nation have been trying to find out what becomes of 500,000,000 milk bottles not returned to them.

Now the mystery bids fair to be solved by the government's order that one cent must be deposited for every bottle delivered to homes.

An official of one New York milk company, which alone loses 10,000,000 bottles a year, said he believed that breakage accounted for only a fractional part of the loss, and that the deposit system would give the first good indication of how many glass containers were broken and how many diverted to other uses.

While milk industry spokesmen agreed that the penny lure would return to circulation many milk bottles now being used as flower pots, bean containers, coin banks, button holders or performing a variety of other unorthodox duties, they said that the details of getting these bottles back to their regular jobs had not been worked out and might be handled differently by different companies.

The grocer, who charges a 3-cent deposit on a milk bottle, will naturally refuse to redeem any but store bottles. The route man, who leaves two bottles on your doorstep every morning, will add 14 cents to your weekly bill and credit you with a cent for each bottle you return. Whether the credits may exceed the number of bottles charged against a customer is something each company must decide for itself.

"We guess that there are about six milk bottles, on an average, kicking around every home," said an official of one large company. "Most housewives probably won't turn them all in at once. When one of her daily bottles breaks, maybe she'll turn in one of the old ones."

The Belgian Congo covers an area equivalent to that of the fifteen southern states.

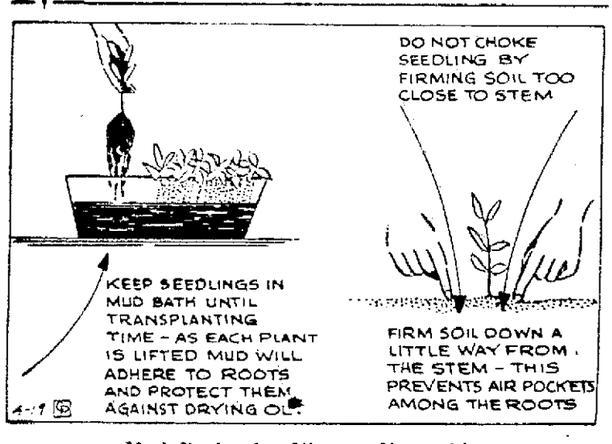
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



DO NOT CHOKE SEEDLING BY FIRMING SOIL TOO CLOSE TO STEM
KEEP SEEDLINGS IN MUD BATH UNTIL TRANSPLANTING TIME – AS EACH PLANT IS LIFTED MUD WILL ADHERE TO ROOTS AND PROTECT THEM AGAINST DRYING OUT
FIRM SOIL DOWN A LITTLE WAY FROM THE STEM – THIS PREVENTS AIR POCKETS AMONG THE ROOTS

Mud Baths for Victory Vegetables.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

If you purchase your Victory vegetable seedlings, instead of growing them yourself, you may find upon getting the plants home that most of the soil has dried and fallen away from their roots. This can be the result of carelessness in not watering the flat sufficiently to cause the soil to form a compact ball about the roots when the plants are lifted.

If you find your seedlings to be in the above described condition the best way to keep such plants until you can set them out is to fill a pan with a thin mud mixture and keep the seedlings in this mud until transplanting time.

When the plants are lifted out of the pan containing the mud mixture the wet soil will adhere to their roots, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, and protect them against drying out.

When setting out these young plants and firming them in place, do not choke the stem of each plant by firming too closely to it. Press the soil gently but firmly around each plant so as not to leave any air pockets. Instead of packing the soil tightly against the stem proper firm the soil an inch or more away from the stem as illustrated.

Five things should be remembered in transplanting Victory vegetable plants: (1) Do not let the roots dry out. (2) Dig a hole large enough to accommodate the roots without crowding. (3) Set the plant a little deeper in the soil than as formerly planted. (4) Press the soil down around the roots firmly to prevent air pockets. (5) Water the newly transplanted plants immediately after setting them.

"Pure as a snow flake . . . fresh as the dew,
Sweet as the sunshine . . . good clear through
Priced so thrifty . . . packaged so handy,
You know the answer . . . it's CHUCKLES Candy!"

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

Editor's Note: Raymond Clapper is on his way to Sweden, one of the few neutral "listening posts" left in Europe. He will report his observations there by wireless. The column below is one of several he prepared before leaving Washington.

WASHINGTON — I was writing some advance columns to run while I was on the way to Sweden when this letter came to our house from a young soldier in North Africa, who used to tend our rose bushes and our lawn.

He wanted to be a scientist, and he prepared for college by attending night school. A few days after Pearl Harbor he enlisted. He is an armorer in the air forces in North Africa.

* * *

Clapper

"I have just finished reading 'Miracle Hunters' by Paul De Kruif and I am sorry I read it. It made me long for my microscope and the peace of my room where I was surrounded by my books. How I yearn for a chance to go again to the Cosmos club and hear lectures by men who are fighting nature, trying to make her give up her secrets just as Pasteur and others did.

"I want to go back to college and learn the millions of things I need to know in order to do the experimental work that I have had in mind for so many years.

"Fifteen months I have been in the army. Why does God allow that blithering idiot to cause such turmoil in this world? I guess this question has been asked time and again and I cannot see how any mortal can answer it.

"Even here where the roar of planes and the rumble of tanks make one's nerves jump, there is a sort of peace and quiet. I often go up into the hills and look down upon the man-made instruments of death as they crawl across the landscape. These rolling hills seem to look down with an amused contempt on my fellow men struggling and sweating and swearing as they clear fields for planes and build roads for the supplies that must go onward and onward. Day after day trucks, tanks and men go rushing forward as if it was the most important work on earth.

"The Romans struggled through here, beating down the shrubs and trampling the flowers underfoot just as we are doing. The hills looked down upon them also and smiled. Centuries passed. Little by little the rains washed the soil from these everlasting hills and covered the things that man had strived so hard to build. Flowers bloomed and died, scattering their seed over the soil that year by year covered man's achievement deeper and deeper. Only the mighty war lords of those days are known to the schoolchildren of today. The men are forgotten.'

"Why do these things happen? Is humanity like a small boy who busts his britches periodically as he grows? Or maybe we have strayed too far from the path of religion and have to be jerked back as a small dog is kept in place.

"There sure will be a lot of explaining done on judgment day as to why millions of men, women and children had to suffer and die because of the ambitions of a few men."

* * *

Is it or is it not worth taking any risk in trying to build a peace that will free such young men as this from mass murder?

To do nothing, as some of our politicians advise, is to ask for it again. The baby boys are being born now to provide the fodder for the next war. What possible common-sense objection can there be to taking a risk in going after a peace that will allow the next generation to live?

BRICKER FACES STRENGTH TEST ON REPEALER

GOP House Leader Girds For Showdown on Meal Tax Fight With Governor.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — An impending test of whether Gov. John W. Bricker has more influence over the house Republicans than Speaker William M. McCulloch gripped the capitol's attention today.

It is perhaps the most unusual situation of its kind to arise in Bricker's three terms as the state's chief executive, and some of his Republican party leaders say they are disturbed about the possible consequences.

The governor, irate over house refusal to pass his bill removing the sales tax from food served by restaurants and hotels, intends tonight to appeal directly to the legislators.

His plan is to call in members of the house taxation committee and ask them to recommend the bill for passage. It has been tied up in the committee since the senate unanimously approved the measure Jan. 26.

Speaker McCulloch, leader of the house Republican majority, said he was standing firm in his opposition to the sales tax repealer. On April 7 he announced after a caucus of the Republicans that they agreed unanimously the bill should proceed no further.

The Republicans took the position, he said, that approximately $5,000,000 a year in revenue, produced by the tax on food and prescription medicines, might better be retained for post-war use.

McCulloch intended today to confer with the taxation committee members before they saw the governor. He expressed the opinion that, before the committee acted, the house Republicans' views should be re-canvassed in another caucus.

Bricker's skirmish with McCulloch and the taxation committee is starting what likely will be an exciting week in the legislature.

Tomorrow the senate will make a special order of business of the female labor bill, which has been deadlocked since 13 Republicans rebelled March 17 against its provision for a 52-hour work week for women and minors.

Frank E. Whittemore, Republican leader in the senate, predicts the measure will be approved and sent to the house. Governor Bricker has said he would sign it, provided a few minor amendments are made.

SEIZE 2 MORE CONVICTS WHO FLED PRISON

Authorities Narrow To 14 Number of Escapers Still at Large.

BULLETIN

ATHENS, Ga. —(INS)— Two more of the 25 convicts who escaped from the Tattnall state prison at Reidsville, Ga., early Friday were recaptured in Athens today, it was announced by city police, leaving only 12 still at large.

(By International News Service)

ATLANTA, Ga.—The Georgia highway patrol in Atlanta announced today that two more of the 25 convicts who fled the Tattnall state prison near Reidsville early Friday morning had been captured near Dublin, Ga.

Those apprehended at Dublin were identified as Jim Merriweather, 28, serving 12-18 years for robbery from Fulton (Atlanta) county, and Joe McNew, 29, serving 20 years for forgery and felony from Floyd county.

Other details of the capture were not immediately available.

Capture of Merriweather and McNew left at large only 14 of the desperadoes, including Forrest Turner and Leland Harvey, termed by prison officials as dangerous criminals and leaders of the mass break.

Meanwhile, search for Turner and Harvey was intensified in the Atlanta area following reports to the Atlanta police department that the two had been seen in an automobile in the city last night.

Four of the fugitives were recaptured yesterday—three as they clung to the top of a freight car near Soperton, Ga., and the fourth in a wooded area near Glennville, 15 miles from Tattnall.

Those taken into custody near Soperton were listed by prison officials as Richard Nalley, 21, serving a life term for murder from Stephens county. Burna Micka, 17, serving 10 to 15 years for robbery from Monroe county, and Arville Meeks, 23, serving four years for larceny from Fulton.

Robert Keith, 33, serving 31-35 years for burglary and escape from Floyd county was captured near Glennville. Frank Dupree, 24, serving a life term for murder in Dekalb county was apprehended Saturday night, and two others—William Gaultney and Jack Jenkins—were seized Friday.

The 25 made their bid for freedom in one of the largest mass breaks in Georgia's penal history shortly after midnight Friday after overpowering three guards and disrupting the prison's electric and telephone system.

BRANDS PRESS BAN DANGEROUS

Editors' President Attacks Policy of Keeping Full Information From Public.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Government restrictions on news coverage of the forthcoming United Nations Food conference were branded today as "dangerous precedents" by Roy A. Roberts, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, in a statement issued in conjunction with the ASNE's board of directors, called for abandonment of a policy that "promotes distrust of the government."

In New York to attend the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, Roberts assailed "President Roosevelt's "declared policy" for establishing a condition which if continued "will stifle the right of free inquiry and prevent continuous flow of full information to the public."

"The government should not use voluntary censorship to serve its convenience and interest," Roberts said. "We should strongly hold to the principle that in the United States the people have a right to participate in public decisions."

"Dangerous precedents," he continued, "are being established which will hide in a cloud of public misunderstanding and doubt the solution of international problems, raising a question whether open covenants are being openly arrived at."

Roberts pointed out that military information is not involved in withholding news of the conference stating that press and public gladly withhold information that might aid the enemy.

Up and Down THE STREET

Mansfield Boy Scouts are doing their part again this year in the national conservation program. A group of scouts from troops 5 and 6 hiked to Camp Avery Hand, jr., Saturday morning to carry out a tree planting program. The scouts hope for the same success with this year's planting as they had with that last year. According to Floyd Dent, scout executive, 95 per cent of the trees planted last year are still growing.

* * *

Who is mayor of Mansfield? Any native will tell you William J. Locke, but the World Almanac for 1943 lists among mayors of United States cities Mansfield's mayor as "Edward Wert, Democrat, term expiring in 1947." Observant Mansfield librarians discovered that even the authorities can be wrong.

County Superintendent Boyd Robinson should be able to do an extra good job of signing his name by this time. He completed the task this afternoon of signing diplomas for 219 students who will be graduated from the nine consolidated schools of Richland county between April 29 and May 28. This number, or others of similar sizes, multiplied by the nine years Robinson has been superintendent, not to mention the signatures of his teaching days and other activities, adds up to the good penmanship deduction.

One Vehicle Turns Over After Collision at Intersection Early This Morning.

Police today were investigating a traffic accident in which four persons were injured at 12:30 a. m. Monday in a two-car collision at Harker and Bowman streets.

Mrs. William R. Griffith, 28, of Mansfield, R. D. 1, suffered a fractured collarbone and head lacerations, and was taken to General hospital. Her husband, 27, with whom she was riding, suffered bruises.

Treated for minor injuries were Paul Parcenue, Ashland, said to have been the driver of the second car, and his companion, Paul Oscar Grimes, also of Ashland.

Traffic patrolmen said Parcenue admitted driving through a red light shortly before his car collided with the one driven by Griffith. The Griffith car turned over. Parcenue and Grimes had left the hospital today before police had a chance to question them further.

A charge of unsafe operation against Fred Zeitler, Mansfield, R. D. 2, was dismissed following a hearing this morning in municipal court.

Traffic patrolmen said Zeitler's car jumped over the curb at Park avenue east and Hedges street and crashed into the railing at the Art-Rattan plant entrance about 2 a. m. Sunday.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—One time, in his early days as a press agent, an energetic young man we shall Frank Perrett, because that is his true hanhought he had come up with a new one.

"The gateman," said he, with artful enthusiasm, his boss, "failed to recognize Colleen Moore en she came through the studio gate this morn!" (Colleen was playing an old woman that day "So Big;" the time was 1925.)

The boss just smiled and said the gateman notrecognizing-the-star-story was such old stuff that no one, not even an enthusiastic Perrett, could get it in print again. Whereupon, a bet was made. A story was written that Colleen, made up as an old lady, was immediately recognized by the gateman.

Coons

* * *

The perpetrator of that harmless phony didn't know, and may not know until he reads this, how close he was to the th. For a gateman who can't recognize the stars his lot, no matter how they are made up, isn't rth his weight in film.

Let's give the poor, maligned gateman five mins to refute the slander. Our spokesman will be ing Gibbs, now at Twentieth Century, who's n watching them come and go for more than years.

"The truth of the matter," says Brother Gibbs, "is that a gateman has to spot the stars, no matter what they have on their faces. But if he's got good sense, there's many a time that he pretends he he doesn't know them.

"Nothing deflates a star playing a character role more than to have folks recognize him through his makeup the first time he appears in it around the studio. Just think, the chances are he had to be in the makeup department by 5:30 in the morning and the boys worked on him until 9, putting on whiskers, building wrinkles and maybe adding a scar here and there. Makeup men love to put scars on actors. I don't know why. Boy, did we have a time when they made 'Black Swan' and had all those pirates!

* * *

"One of our players is Lee Cobb, who's a little over 30 but he always plays old men. For 'The Moon Is Down' he wears a wig of thinnish white hair and a scraggy mustache. Like a good gateman, part of whose job is to help keep everybody happy, I pretended I didn't know him and made him show me his studio pass. Boy, he was flattered!

"I'd never met Orson Welles before he came here for 'Jane Eyre.' I'd heard different ideas about him, but I've learned since he is a regular fellow. Anyway, the first day he came in all fixed up in dark makeup with his hair wild, something done to his nose, and I said, politely, 'Good morning, Mr. Welles.' Brother, that was unkind. I could see him wince. I shouldn't have done it."

LARCENY CHARGE

Shelby Youths Confess Theft of Sawmill Machinery.

Grand larceny charges today were filed against Charles Need, 19, and Vernon Swank, 20, both of Shelby R. D. 2, who confessed that they stole machinery from the Kenneth Arter sawmill, also near Shelby.

The youths, arrested at the Swank home Friday, had been held in county jail for investigation until today when the more serious charge was filed by Assistant Prosecutor Charles Freehafer, who with Sheriff Frank Robinson, heard their admissions to the crime. Swank who is due for army induction Tuesday also confessed participation in gasoline thefts in the Shelby community.

The pair allegedly disposed of a share of the machinery from the Arter mill at a Mansfield junk yard, where Arter today tried to regain possession of it since some of the pieces cannot be bought now because of priorities.

Lorain Keglers Take Lead In Inter-City Doubles List

Sport Podge by REX HESS

"You know," said Lorain Coach Harold Pryor as he copied down the sad results of last Saturday's track meet with Mansfield's Tygers, "I'd like to play you fellows in football, but I'm not going to do it."

"I'd like to play too," responded Mansfield Athletic Director Harry Mehock, "and I really think we ought to get together."

"Sure," agreed Pryor, "Lorain and Mansfield ought to be playing each other right along, and some of the Lorain schoolmen keep asking me why I don't get a game with Mansfield. When they ask me that, I tell them that when they give me the set-up in the junior high schools that you have down here, I'll play Mansfield.

* * *

"Understand," said the Lorain mentor, "I'm not afraid to play Mansfield right now. I think we'd hold our own, and in fact I think we'd do a little better than hold our own.

"I believe we raise a little rougher, tougher type of boy in Lorain than you do in Mansfield, and year after year we'd have a bigger, tougher team.

"My football team would be made up of big boys like those kids I had putting the shot today, not like the little kids you had running. (There were three halfbacks on the Mansfield half-mile relay team.)

* * *

"But I want that junior high system, so when they say let's play Mansfield, I tell 'em give me the setup Mansfield has and we'll play."

* * *

"How many junior highs have you?" I asked him.

"Four," says he.

"That would give you a mighty fine system," I needlessly told him.

"That it would," he agreed just as needlessly.

"But as far as playing Mansfield is concerned, you have to look out for your league," I reminded him.

"Oh, we don't care so much about the league," he returned. "Our biggest game every year has been with Sandusky, and they're not in the league.

* * *

Pryor evidently doesn't know it, but, from the information I gather from former Lorain residents, he already has the Mansfield set-up in four junior high schools instead of two.

These former residents tell me that the Lorain junior highs have been playing each other in football and basketball for years.

What Pryor apparently wants is the Massillon system, with coaches of recognized reputation and ability for each school.

* * *

The Mansfield system is similar to that in Massillon, but they are far from identical.

* * *

Coaches of junior high school teams here may be hired because of their coaching ability, but their coaching is extra-curricular, comes after a full day of school work, and carries no additional remuneration.

And that, as I understand it, is just about the situation in Lorain.

Pryor should start asking his schoolmen if they wouldn't like to play Massillon, if they gave him the Massillon system.

French Barred From Pitching

NEW YORK (AP)—A navy ruling in the Larry French case today apparently had doomed the hopes of other baseball players now in the service to participate in major league games.

* * *

French, a lieutenant stationed at the Brooklyn navy yard, had asked permission to pitch for the Brooklyn Dodgers during his free time to establish a lifetime record of 200 mound victories. His 14-year total now stands at 197. He had offered to donate his salary to navy relief.

* * *

However, Rear Admiral W B Young of Washington formally denied the petition in a letter to Capt. R. C. Sanders, head of the supplies department at the navy yard, stating that such permission would result "in a flood of similar requests."

French won 15 games for the Dodgers last year.

New High Scored In All-Events

Singles Threatened By Bowler From Warren.

THE LORAIN Tornado hit the Inter-City bowling tournament yesterday, and now the tourney boasts new leaders in the doubles division who are apt to keep their position through the home stretch.

* * *

Alex Black, star of last year's Colony singles and doubles tournament, and Leo Bentley hit their strides in the doubles yesterday morning, tumbling the pins for a mark of 1309, after running into a lot of big splits in the five-man the night before.

* * *

The excitement they created was a bit more than that stirred up by Tod Morrell of Warren. Morrell needed a strike-out in his last game to take over leadership in the singles division with a 707 count. And his easy delivery, and the consistency with which he'd been hitting the 1-3 pocket made him look like a safe bet to do it.

But whether or not the pressure got him, his 10th frame ball hit high on the headpin, and he had to pick up the four for a spare. And his extra ball was good only for a wide split, and 682 for third place.

The 682 boosted him into first place in all-events, however, with a mark of 1962, or 62 pins over the previous high.

Club Bowling Center of Warren went into third place in the five-man with 2911, Stone's Grill of Sandusky took fifth with 2899, Ideal Dairies of Painesville eighth with 2850, and Nick Amster Clothing of Wooster ninth with 2843.

V. Bartholomew and F. Inneralli of Wooster took fourth in doubles with 1243, Art Thomas, former Mansfielder, and E. Hirt of Sandusky seventh with 1230, Morrell and S Focorzi of Warren ninth with 1218.

J. Dolores of Elyria took eighth in singles with 661, and G. Williams of Wadsworth tenth with 656.

Black took third in all-events with 1888, L. Smith of Sandusky fifth with 1877, and Wally Glenwright, coach of Sandusky high athletic teams before they suspended for the duration, sixth with 1856.

Dr. C. Menser of Ashland marked up 12 straight strikes, but seven of them came in his last game of doubles, and five on the first game of singles.

Manpower Czar Subs For FDR

WASHINGTON — (INS) — War Manpower Czar Paul V. McNutt, today was warming up his pitching arm in preparation for tossing out of the first ball in tomorrow's 1943 season opener between the Washington Senators and the Philadelphia Athletics.

McNutt accepted the hurling assignment after it was made clear that President Roosevelt would not be able to make the first pitch.

Inviting McNutt to throw out the first ball Clark Griffith, president of the Senators, said that "it seems fitting to me that the head of one of our great war agencies should head up the opening game program. Besides Mr. McNutt is an experienced pitcher."

Who Said Umps Are Blind?

Players and fans may claim that umpires are blind, but the U. S. army doesn't think so, at least in the case of Art Passarella of the American league. He is pictured, right above, just after he had been found to be in perfect physical condition at the induction center in Chicago. At left is Maj. H. S. Gordon of the induction center staff. Passarella will leave for camp after umpiring the annual city series between the White Sox and Cubs.

Grandpaw guards first base;
Uncle Joe is fat and slow;
But still he has his place.
You'd never know our sluggers' row;
To call it that is treason.
We ain't got what we used to have
To start the baseball season.
We don't need what we used to have
As long as there's a war on,
If you think we won't miss those guys,
Pally, you're a moron.

Canadian Again Cops Marathon

Takes Boston Classic In Spite of Injury.

BOSTON — (INS) — A Canadian army sergeant, Gerard Cote, today had won his second victory in the Boston AA marathon, one of America's best known road classics.

Cote finished 1 minute 38 1-5 seconds ahead of Private Johnny Kelly of Boston and the United States army, who was second. The two had raced side by side over all but the last five miles of the marathon.

The little Canadian infantry sergeant who gained his first B.A.A. victory in 1940 was given scant chance to win the race because of a pulled tendon. He admitted afterward that it bothered him much more mentally than physically. "I was afraid it was going to give way every minute," he said, "but it didn't start paining until the last mile."

Most of the other favorites in the small starting field of 89, which included four other former winners, were among the earliest to reach the finish line.

Fred McGlone of Boston, national marathon champion, was a close third in 2:30 11. Lloyd Barstow of Boston, now in the United States navy, was fourth in 2:33 4/47 and Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, R. I. a three-time B.A.A. winner, was fifth in 2:35 58.

ROOKIE JOE DI MAGGIO FACES FLYING KELLY'S

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—(INS)—Santa Ana's prize rookie, "Joltin'" Joe DiMaggio, and team mates are slated to tangle with Albuquerque's Flying Kelly's in a game at Tingley Field tonight.

Yesterday, in the face of the heavy artillery fire of Joe's bat the Kelly's managed a 3-2 win over Santa Ana. Joe connected for a pair of doubles and a single in four trips to the plate.

PHILLIES DEFEAT ATHLETICS IN WINDUP

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—Connie Mack's Athletics were off for tomorrow's American league opening game with the Washington Senators today, after suffering a 4-1 setback by the Phils in the final game of the Quaker city series.

The Phils victory evened up the series at two all. Earl Naylor's hard-hit homer with two men on sewed up the game for Bucky Harris' boys. Russ Christopher, who retired nine Phils in the first three innings for a perfect report card, scored the only tally for the Mackmen.

Managers Pick Spot To Finish

Boudreau Still Says Tribe Team To Beat.

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK—(AP)—If all the indecision expressed by the major league managers on the eve of the second baseball campaign of the present war era were placed end to end it would be as evasive as a Axis communique.

The curtailed training offered by the northern camps, playing out the schedule that opens tomorrow with a new type of ball and the war's manpower demands have combined to make the managers even more reticent than usual.

Only Lou Boudreau, 25-year-old manager-shortstop of the Cleveland Indians, gave an entirely optimistic answer as the Associated Press made its annual pre-season poll of the 16 masters of diamond strategy.

* * *

"I am very much convinced that the Indians are the team to beat in the American league pennant race," said the youthful chieftain. "My club will be in there all season and definitely is the one they will have to beat."

Billy Southworth, who guided the St. Louis Cardinals to their world title last fall, said he was well satisfied with the replacements for Terry Moore, Enos Slaughter and Johnny Beazley—now wearing Uncle Sam's uniforms.

"But I am not making any predictions for the coming year," he added, "although we will be speedy on the basic paths, have a well-rounded pitching staff and the best catching in the league. We will, as in the past, use our speed to the best advantage."

Jimmy Dykes, leader of the Chicago White Sox, expressed the thoughts of virtually all the managers when he said "this ought to be a very interesting season because the picture can change any time.

* * *

"You might go to bed one night with your club in first place and wake up in the morning with it in the army. I don't see how any team can make a runaway of the pennant races."

* * *

Joe McCarthy, whose rebuilt New York Yankees didn't defeat a single major league foe this spring but still are favored for their seventh flag in eight years, replied that it is "too risky to make predictions. I can't tell how the Yanks will fare. Nobody can."

"I'm not making a prediction," chimed in Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, "but I will say that I am satisfied with my team and that it is ready."

Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds was even more silent than customary. "I haven't seen another National League club all spring and with conditions as unsettled as they are, It would be foolish to pick the winner."

Answering a question by asking one was Chicago Cub Jimmy Wilson's reply. He came back with "I don't predict, but a guy would be crazy not to be shooting for first place, wouldn't he?"

Frankie Frisch, turbulent mentor of the Pittsburgh Pirates, admitted he was eyeing the first division "but in a war year one doesn't know what to expect. I think the majors will finish the season and draw well."

* * *

Casey Stengel of the Boston Braves, Mel Ott of the New York Giants and Bucky Harris, now of the Philadelphia Phillies, promised to be troublesome all season.

* * *

Memories of what happened during the seasons of World war tempered Connie Mack's response. The veteran boss of the Philadelphia Athletics predicted that "there may be a lot of surprises before the season is over. Someone may come up with a duplicate of the Boston Braves of 1914 who climbed from last place in July to first in October. But I still think the Yanks are the team to beat although the Athletics will do all right."

The American league's two new managers, Ossie Bluege of the Washington Senators and Steve O'Neill of the Detroit Tigers, both were confident.

Bluege asserted his club was the most improved of any in the circuit while O'Neill warned that if "First Baseman Rudy York has a big year—and it looks like he may — then watch out for the Tigers."

That warning also was sent out by Luke Sewell of the St. Louis Browns, who declared "it is impossible for anyone to say how the race will come out but I do know that the Browns are not going to be shoved around."

The Boston Red Sox, whose contributions to the armed services includes an entire outfield and one of the game's better shortstops, remained optimistic, Manager Joe Cronin observing "since all clubs have been hit hard, I look for a real good race."

FEARS BALATA BALL MADE OF BOLOGNA

RICHMOND, Ind. —(AP)— After watching the Cleveland Indians and Cincinnati Reds get only one extra base hit in 21 innings, General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Reds declared that maybe the manufacturers "used ground up bologna instead of Balata and cork" as the core for the 1943 ball.

Giles is a member of the committee that designed the ball.

Dark Horses Turn In Usual Stories of Amazing Workouts

By CHARLES MOREY

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The Kentucky Derby has had such a tang and appeal for America's turfmen that, from the time Aristides "rolled down the pike" to victory in 1875 in the first derby, they often have entered horses in the "rose run" just to see their colors up.

* * *

Every once in a while one of these forlorn hopes hammers under the wire in front. Milky Way farm's Gallahadion did it in 1940 when he drove through a heart-breaking final quarter to chop Bimelech, the king of the Bradley M's, in the first race he ever lost.

* * *

This year again the usual quota of dark horses are going through a derby prep with the usual wild stories about amazing workouts and incredible clockings. Perhaps the most of colorful of these and one that must be given a chance for the derby gold on his two-year-old record is Burnt Cork, a son of Mr. Bones, who races for that distinguished gentleman of stage and screen—Eddie (Rochester) Anderson.

Burnt Cork already has been a bundle of honey for Anderson and, if he never wins another race, Eddie will have pocketed a nice profit. He collared the colt for $400 as a yearling and last season, as a two-year-old, Burnt Cork earned $10,530.

The most impressive thing about the Anderson colt was his steadiness. In 10 starts he won six, was second once and third twice. He finished out of the money only once.

Burnt Cork did most of his racing in the mid-west. He started at Lincoln Fields in May and continued through the Hawthorne meeting in September. His best performance came in his second race when he outgamed the fleet Devil's Thumb for a half-length victory in a six-furlong affair at Arlington park.

* * *

The son of Mr. Bones was shipped to the west coast in the fall and in his lone start there he ripped six furlongs over the Bay Meadows track in 1:11—smart timing for a juvenile at that course.

* * *

Burnt Cork likes best to run in front—which may do him no good at all. The derby this year is cluttered with speedballs and if he tries to take the track at the break, he may find it hard to keep up. One of the longest shots still eligible, Burnt Cork is 25-to-1 in the winter book.

Paul Revere Could Have Used the Count.

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK —(AP)— This 19th day of April in '43 was a lot in common with the 19th of April in '75. There was a lot of fuss about a horse on both days.

That time, 168 years ago, Paul Revere and his hay-burner had just finished their big ride. Maybe Count Fleet is shooting at something not quite so big, but even in these times $75,000 ain't hay. Besides, the Count has a cut left hind foot, while not considered too serious in itself, carries the threat of infection—and then there'd be no pot for the Count at all.

* * *

But cut foot and all, Mrs. John D. Hertz's pride and joy got ready today for a business trip to Louisville. They way things look now all he has to do is show up at the Kentucky Derby to pick up that fancy bankroll, even though some nine or ten other three-year-olds are going to make him prove it.

* * *

These are the brave colts still listed as probable starters—pointing to a possible field of 10 or a dozen—whose best friends keep telling them that the most they can get out of it is seconds money of $8,000.

Four or five other horses from this neighborhood remained willing to go along with the Hertz hurricane and take their chances in the big May 1 race.

Newcomers in this set were Slide Rule and Twoses, from the barn of W. E. Boeing. Trainer Cecil Wilhelm announced he would ship these two—they finished fifth and third back of the Count on Saturday—to the blue grass Thursday unless owner Boeing turned thumbs down. He's figuring on running them in the derby trial mile a week from tomorrow.

Little Chance For Conn-Louis Bout

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— A return bout between Sgt. Joe Louis and Corp. Billy Conn during the war appeared improbable today.

Senator Warren Barbour of New Jersey had written to newspaper editors, proposing that sports writers and other interested persons make representations to government officials for reconsideration of a Louis-Conn fight. A bout between the two men was cancelled on orders of Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson last Oct. 12.

The rematch plan received a knockout blow when the public relations office at Camp Lee, Va., revealed that Conn had departed in a "routine transfer of general service enlisted men to combat duty."

Batting Practice Ordered

Indians Win Only One Game From Big Leaguers.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians returned to the home reservation today after concluding an exhibition schedule in which they won only one of seven games against major league opposition furnished by the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cincinnati Reds.

Still concerned about the lack of base hits, Manager Lou Boudreau ordered batting practice at the stadium today and tomorrow in preparation for the opener Wednesday with the Detroit Tigers.

Outfielder Jeff Heath, who has been trying to get transportation from Seattle for a week, made his first appearance in the lineup yesterday as the Tribe dropped a 10-inning 2 to 1 decision to the Reds in Cincinnati.

Jeff took a half hour of batting practice before the game and then stepped in and hit as if he had been swinging at major league pitching for several months. He made a perfect showing at the plate, securing two of the Indians' six singles.

Both Cincinnati runs were unearned, the result of a pair of errors by Boudreau, whose fielding record for the spring had been perfect until yesterday.

In the two games in Cincinnati the Indians had their first experience with the new 1943 official ball with the balata core, and their reactions were definiately negative.

"Unless they can improve that agate .275 will win the batting championship," one Tribesman predicted sourly.

BUCKY WORKS OUT

RICHMOND, Ind.—(AP)—Bucky Walters, who got cured of impromptu hurdling the opening day of spring training over in Bloomington, tried out his sprained left ankle today as the Cincinnati Reds meet the St. Paul Saints of the American Association in their last exhibition race.

Bucky scarcely has thrown a serious ball since he tripped trying to get over a high hurdle at the Indiana U. fieldhouse, but he and Manager Bill McKetchnie think he can work a little. However, he won't get into a regular game for a while.

Gerry Merryman Leads Keglerettes

Kate Warga took high game with 193.

MILD ADVANCES RECORDED FOR STOCK LEADERS

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Most stock market leaders displayed mild advancing tendencies in today's early proceedings.

Up fractionally at a fairly fast opening were Sears Roebuck, Deere, Standard Oil of Ind., and Kennecott. U. S. Steel was off a shade, along with American Can and General Electric.

Market observers noted the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that purchasing in this field was less active than a month ago, which was interpreted as a breathing spell between quarters. It was added that, in general, little tonnage was available for the current three months in sheets and bars.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Lack of buying power eased wheat at the opening today, but rye and oats advanced on small commission house purchases.

Wheat started unchanged to ¼ lower, May $1.43⅜, and corn was unchanged at ceilings, May $1.05.

THEATERS

Deanna Honored.

An outstanding hero of Bataan and personal physician to President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines, Major Benvenuto Dino, became unnerved for the first time in his life when he met Deanna Durbin. Visiting California on a special mission for the exiled Philippine government in Washington, Major Dino took a brief recess to visit Universal studios. He met Miss Durbin on the set of "The Amazing Mrs Holliday," which is currently playing at the Ohio. After they had exchanged greetings, Dino fumbled for a personal card, to ask for the star's autograph. "My hands never trembled in the Philippines, they didn't tremble on Bataan, nor during my escape from the Philippines with MacArthur. But they sure did when I met Miss Durbin," Dino said.

Poor Mickey.

Mickey Rooney sells his famous jaloppy and starts for college, amid hilarious trials and tribulations in "Andy Hardy's Double Life," now showing at the Ritz. He is "framed" by a girl who insists he proposed to her. When he finally gets his tangled affairs straightened out in time to get the train for college he finds a pretty co-ed bound for the same place. There's more trouble ahead for Mickey. Co-attraction at the Ritz is "King of the Circus."

• • •

Many Parts.

Fredric March, male lead in "I Married a Witch," the Rene Clair comedy now showing at the Park, plays more characters in this picture than he did in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," for which he won the Academy award. March takes six roles in "I Married a Witch," starting as a stern Puritan and becoming, finally, Wally Wooley, hero of modern times. Veronica Lake is co-starred with March. Co-attraction is "Get Hep to Love."

• • •

Chaney and Lugosi.

Lon Chaney and Bela Lugosi, Hollywood's horror champs, are united in "Frankenstein Meets the Wolf Man," currently showing at the Madison. Stars of the picture are Ilona Massey and Patric Knowles. Lugosi, in the role of the monster, is frozen in ice, chopped out and revived; Chaney in the role of the Wolf Man, is supposedly dead and entombed, but when two grave robbers pry open the stone coffin, they find him alive. The co-feature at the Madison is "The Mysterious Doctor."

GETS 1ST WORD OF SON, MISSING SINCE BATAAN

King, of north of Mansfield; George Zimmerman, brother of Fred and Mrs. Zimmerman, and Mrs. Lent Harrick, all of Mansfield. They landed in the Philippines in November, 1941.

Two other Ohioans also with the tank battalion and two other Mansfielders who were with the "outer guard" on Bataan are also believed in enemy hands.

With the Mansfield men were Capt. Kenneth Collins of Lecarne, a cousin of A. C. Adams, 363 Garfield place, and John Minier, of Port Clinton, a brother of Mrs. Adams.

The other two are Nelson B. Hale, jr., son of Mrs. Leah C. Black, 189 East Fourth street, a member of the 31st infantry, and Sgt. Leslie D. Sawyer, son of Mrs. Carrie Sawyer, 236 Rae avenue, with the Marine corps.

Mrs. Robinette said she received word by telephone from Washington her son was held prisoner, but was too stunned to remember who had called. She said she could not recall whether it was a representative of the war department or the Red Cross. The caller promised that verification would follow by mail within the next few days.

"Naturally I'm pleased with the message," she said, "but I'm worried concerning the treatment that he may be receiving at the hands of the enemy."

Mrs. Robinette said she had last heard from her son more than a year ago. None of the families of the other Mansfield men has received any word concerning the welfare of their kin as yet.

NOTED OHIO BANKER DIES

Squire Rose From Messenger Boy To Be Superintendent of State Banking System.

TIFFIN — (AP) — Samuel H. Squire, who rose from messenger boy to bank president and later became state superintendent of banks, died last night at the age of 69.

He had been actively engaged in the banking business in Ohio for more than 50 years and was president of the Tiffin National bank at the time of his death.

Squire entered the business at the age of 17 as a messenger for the old First National bank at Elyria, his native city. He was graduated through every position to the executive vice presidency, a post he held when the bank merged with Lorain County Savings and Trust in 1922.

He was president of the Lorain County Savings and Trust when Gov. Martin L. Davey drafted him as Ohio's superintendent of banks. He served in that post for two terms under Davey and had the distinction of being the only Democrat in Gov. John W. Bricker's administration. He resigned in 1940 to assume the presidency of the Tiffin bank.

While supervising the state banking system, Squire also served on the advisory board of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation. He had held numerous other public offices including the presidency of the Elyria city council.

Squire was a 33rd degree Mason and was grand master of the Grand lodge of Ohio Masons in 1934. He was also governor of Ohio Rotary in 1920-21.

Funeral services will be Wednesday in Elyria.

Father and Daughter Killed as Flag Pole Topples on High Tension Wire.

probably had been dead from the time the charge entered her body.

Attorney Will called the sheriff's office which, in turn, called the Ohio Public Service emergency squad. The utility men removed the pole from the wire after Deputy Sheriff Joe Hetler, responding to the call, had roped off the area to prevent further accidents.

The pole, an inch and a half pipe about 25 feet long, had a knob on the end of it which had become hooked over the wire, the officers said. They were told that Mrs. Duffner had warned the victims against letting the pole touch the wire by knocking on her bedroom window only a few minutes before.

She was near collapse as the bodies of her husband and only child were removed to the Finefrock Funeral Home.

Double rites will be conducted from the funeral home at 2 p. m. Tuesday, according to plans completed today, with Rev. C. H. Bowers, pastor of the Ontario Community church, in charge. Burial will be in the Ontario cemetery.

Mr. Duffner was born in Springfield township Oct. 27, 1893 and had been a resident of that community all his life.

Besides the widow, Althea Broughton Duffner, he is survived by three brothers, Clarence, of Crestline, Henry, of Ashland and Walter, of Ontario.

Aleatha was born in Ontario July 8, 1925. She would have graduated from the Ontario high school in the June class of this year.

ENOUGH WHISKY FOR THREE YEARS

WPB Says Product Won't Be Rationed By U. S.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — There is enough whisky on hand to last approximately three years at the 1942 rate of consumption and the federal government has no idea of rationing distilled spirits at this time.

That statement was made today by John B. Smiley, director of the WPB beverages and tobacco division.

His statement, of course, applied only to federal rationing of liquor. Ohio and some other states either already are rationing spirituous beverages or are preparing to do so soon.

126,000 TONS OF CLOTHING AND FOOD SHIPPED TO NORTH AFRICA

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., disclosed today that his agency has shipped 126,184 tons of food, clothing, medicines and other necessities of life to North Africa in the first four months of United Nations occupation of the area.

In addition, he said, Great Britain has sent more than 350,000 tons of coal for North Africa's railroads and industries, and lesser amounts of other civilian supplies.

He said it is hoped with the aid of lend-lease supplies that North African farm production can be increased so that many of the food requirements of American and British forces in this area can be supplied locally. Normally, he said, North Africa is a surplus producer of wheat, fruits, vegetables, lamb and mutton, olive oil and some other foodstuffs.

The Nazis, however, stripped the land of its resources and left the people hungry and ragged by the time American and British forces arrived, Stettinius said.

"Axis agents shipped out everything that was movable," he said. "They shipped in little. In the cities, stores with empty shelves were closed. Farmers hid supplies of goods to keep it from Nazi hands. Mining, communications, transportation and agricultural equipment broke down for lack of replacement parts and fuel."

Lend-lease shipments dispatched to North Africa, he said, had a dollar value of about $26,250,000.

DESCRIBES HOW BOMBS FELL ON GUADALCANAL

Marine Captain Tells About Tremendous Strain on Nerves.

(Editor's Note: In the following exclusive interview with International News Service, Capt. Donald G Payzant tells of the magnificent fight put up by U. S. Marines on Guadalcanal and how it feels to be under a tremendous nervous strain as well as enemy fire.)

(By International News Service)

NEW RIVER, N C.—After 138 days at the front in Guadalcanal while the Japanese pounded Henderson Field almost ceaselessly, Capt. Donald G Payzant of the United States Marine corps can give you a pretty good idea of what it feels like to be under fire.

"Cold spots come in the middle of your back and your stomach contracts under the tremendous nervous strain," Payzant says of the period before an attack.

"Sometimes we could see enemy planes coming 35 or 40 miles away We could see bombs beginning to drop five miles off. It was certain they were aimed for Henderson Field, the exact spot where we were.

"Everybody else could run for comparatively safe shelter on the beaches or elsewhere but our batterymen had to dive into foxholes close by our guns right on the field.

"Big bombs look like small pieces of silver paper or tiny eggs when they first begin to drop. They come tearing down at you at lightning speed with a high pitched screech that makes your heart leap into your throat.

"As they get nearer to earth, you jump quickly into your foxhole. If they make a direct hit, you're a goner. As they strike the ground, they sound like a giant walking towards you. When you hear the giant step beyond you, you know you're okey for that raid.

"Our men even had to eat and sleep by their guns. We were permitted to immobilize one gun at a time at intervals while its crew went down to the Lunga river to wash their clothes."

But despite it all, despite a diet of rice and Vienna sausage for many weeks the Marines had only one squawk—there weren't enough Japs.

Payzant said that the theme of the Marines got to be: "Give us more Japs to kill, more Jap planes at which to shoot . . . We want to get more of the dirty Nips!"

And the more damage the Japs caused the madder and "fightiner" the Marines got. Payzant himself was buried in a hole when a 500 pound bomb struck 13 feet from him but dug out mad clean through. And the thing he was maddest about was that his cup of coffee, resting on the edge of his foxhole, got full of mud and he couldn't drink it.

There was little time or thought of niceties at the fighting front, Payzant said and he related as one example, the fact that the trucks which brought up food carted away the bodies of dead Japs and then returned again with more food. It didn't bother the Marines' stomachs

As to close fighting with the Japs, Payzant gave this report

"Japs prefer to stand off and fence for an opening with their long bayonets but our Marines were in too big a hurry to stop to fence. They parried the Jap bayonets, knocked them away, struck the enemy in the groin with the rifle butts and then stuck their bayonets in vital organs, deep enough to kill instantly.

"It was all done so fast that many a Jap never knew what had hit him."

As one incident of Jap cruelty Payzant told of a native chieftain in Guadalcanal who refused to disclose information to the Japanese They tied him to a tree and used him for bayonet practice then left him there to die He was rescued and his life saved by the Americans.

He told also of a marine who killed a Jap in close fighting On the Jap was an American wallet and in the wallet was a Marine sharpshooter's medal and a photograph—the photograph of the brother of the Marine who killed the Jap

Capt Payzant is the son of Dr L. Payzant Boston physician and Mrs. Payzant, a novelist After his graduation from Tufts college at Medford, Mass in 1939 he had intended to enter the milk business.

However, the prospect that the United States might enter the second World war led him to enlist in the Marine corps in 1940 the next year he was commissioned a second lieutenant and assigned to anti-aircraft and following the entry of this country into the war was promoted to his present rank.

Since returning from Guadalcanal he has had a short leave to visit his parents and is now assigned to New River, where he trained a year ago for his oversea assignment Now he is training other Marines for overseas duty

His opinion of the Japanese soldier is not too high. He believes that the Jap is a good soldier if he is led by trained officers but otherwise has no initiative. As to the officers, they are daring, fanatical, have no regard for their own safety and believe that the highest honor which could come to them would be to die for the emperor.

View Of New Japanese Air Base At Kavieng

Made from a U S reconnaissance plane, this photo shows the Jap air field at Kavieng, New Ireland, one of the numerous South Pacific bases where the Japs are reported massing air strength. Paths lead from the runway to dispersal areas The small appendages along these paths are blast bays for bombers and fighters When the photo was taken, 16 Jap fighters and 28 bombers were in the revetments and repairs were being made on the runway This is an official U S. Army Air Force photo.

HOTEL MEN SAY TRAVELERS DON'T GRUMBLE IN WARTIME

NEW YORK — The American hotel guest, the object of a great deal of private grumbling among hotel men in seasons past, came in for a pat on the back today.

The man who complained if the ice water was only one degree above freezing if his pillow had one feather too few and if the maid woke him at 2 o'clock in the afternoon with a request "Could she please make up the room now— she had to go off duty" is no more.

"The querulous guest," declares a man who should know

—F. Harold Van Orman, president of the American Hotel association—"is almost as extinct as the dodo bird."

The reason? The war!

The average hotel guest—a pretty good cross-section of the average citizen- is taking war restrictions and privations in his stride and his pre-war complaints are at a minimum This was the observation of Van Orman, who has just returned from a hotel business trip that took him to many sections of the country.

"Normal war restrictions have made it necessary to curtail or eliminate entirely many of the services which formerly supplied to guests," he stated. "The draft has made tremendous inroads in our trained personnel and we have had to replace them with willing but untrained workers Women have taken the place of men in many instances, and in the essential male jobs older men have relieved younger ones for service in the armed forces"

Despite this, hotel men all over the country have told Van Orman that guests are accepting necessary sub-standard service with excellent grace Guests realize Van Orman said, that hotels are doing their best under the circumstances

The few querulous guests who do turn up, he added, face not only the implacable fact that we are at war but also the ire of their disgusted fellow guests.

"The average American is not complaining," he added. "He knows that he is better off than anyone else in the world and that every luxury which he misses now is somehow contributing toward our final victory.

"When you tell an American citizen what is expected of him in a time of emergency, you can count on him coming through

NURSE PREDICTS INVASION HELP FROM FRENCH

Tells How German Occupation Forces Fear Arrival of Allies In Europe.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—A French nurse who escaped from France by fleeing across the English channel said today German soldiers manning Nazi defenses on the Brittany coast live in constant fear of invasion

When the invasion comes, said 28 year old Mademoiselle Lucienne, it will find Frenchmen using pitchforks, shovels and clubs fighting side by side with Allied troops.

(The nurse's true name was concealed because of relatives in France.)

She described the morale of German troops as "very bad" and said the soldiers often got only one meal a day—a thick soup.

Mlle. Lucienne reached England a few days ago to join the DeGaulle forces following daring, year-long efforts which finally won her freedom.

Concealing a bitter hatred for the Germans, she worked in a hospital caring for Nazi soldiers and learned much about what they were doing. She made friends with some and said one injured soldier tried to make love to her

Silver streaks in her wavy black hair bore witness to her experiences in Nazi-dominated France, but her eyes shone with excitement as she told of the underground fight being carried on by her countrymen against the invaders

"They don't live for anything else today Those without arms will come carrying pitchforks, shovels, sticks and anything they can get their hands on"

She related how the French people were disappointed when the invasion did not come in March and added that the Germans also expected it at that time.

"When it didn't come, it left them jittery," she continued "Now they are living in constant fear Every time there is a military alert, the soldiers go for days without being allowed to remove their clothes"

The nurse asserted that the French people held a low opinion of German fortifications around the Brittany coast, which she said consisted mostly of tanks obstacles and some cement pillboxes She had been told, she added, that fortifications along other sections of the French coast were stronger, but she had no direct knowledge of the situation outside Brittany.

She said that recently she had been informed that Brest was one of the most heavily defended cities on the continent.

Most of the German troops in Brittany she described as "very young boys" sent there to replace veterans who apparently were sent to the Russion front.

"Few veterans were seen around after the opening of the Russian front," she said, adding that discipline among the young soldiers was maintained by threatening to send them to Russia.

"Several are known to have shot or hanged themselves rather than face this," she continued.

The nurse reported that the forced conscription of labor was rapidly draining the country of young Frenchmen and said that "unless the second front come soon, there will be no young men left to help fight."

"Germany knows this and it is as much a factor in taking them as to increase her own strength"

In one instance shortly before she fled, 1,800 young men were taken from Brittany to labor camps. The Germans post notices in public places listing the names of those conscripted, she said, and if a boy fails to show up a German officer takes him by force.

If he escapes, another member of his family is taken and sent to an unknown destination and all the family ration cards are then cut off.

Soldier Talks Fast to Explain Polished Nails

BAINBRIDGE, Ga. —(INS)— It took some high persuasive arguing, but an army air corps corporal finally convinced a store clerk and several other soldiers that his highly polished fingernails were necessary in his work

The incident occurred when the corporal was making a purchase and passed the clerk a bill

"Oh, my deah," cooed the clerk "What a lovely manicure you have!"

Several other soldiers were standing close by, and began staring at the corporal. The corporal blushed as eyes became fastened on his shining nails—as neatly polished as a co-eds.

"Look you guys," bellowed the corporal. "In my work you gotta have it, see? It's protection."

All the other soldiers lifted their eyebrows skeptically. The corporal, however, finally convinced them.

The corporal said that most of the men in the Bainbridge post photo section protect their nails with polish to keep developing fluids from turning them black.

She's War Bond Queen

From among 500 girls included in the judging, Doris Ives of New York has been selected as "War Bond Queen." Walter Thornton, well-known Chicago photographer, did the selecting. Miss Ives will reign at a War Bond rally at Palisades Park, N. J.

Henri Honore Giraud would be able to sign an accord uniting their followers until after the Axis had been routed from Tunisia.

In the interim, Giraud's duties as French military and civil commander of North Africa will require his presence at military headquarters and occasionally at the front.

Gen. George Catroux, Fighting French representative, returned to Algiers last night with De Gaulle's reply to proposals advanced by Giraud at a previous series of conferences. Catroux was scheduled to confer with Marcel Peyrouton, governor-general of Algiers, today.

RAF Blasts Italian Naval Base At Spezia

LONDON —(AP)— British home-based bombers made the long trip across the Alps again last night to blast the Italian naval base of Spezia for the second time in six nights, it was announced today.

The attack was described as heavy and concentrated and while it was in progress aircraft of the fighter command struck at enemy destroyers at Lorient, the German naval and submarine base on the French coast.

One bomber failed to return from the attack on Spezia. The Italian post was attacked at the beginning of the present long-sustained aerial offensive against continental targets last Tuesday night.

Freight trains and locomotives in northern France also were attacked during the night and one fighter plane was reported missing.

Strong units of the Italian fleet were suspected in hiding at Spezia. Observers said the success of the attack and the weakness of Italian defenses was shown in the contrast between one bomber lost last night and 55 missing from the two-ply blow against the Skoda works at Pilsen and at Mannheim in Germany Friday.

Attacking Spezia were Lancasters, Halifaxes and Stirlings which flew at least 1,350 miles on the round trip.

Nazis Routed From Russian Trenches

MOSCOW — (U.P.) — Reinforced German troops, resuming their assault after losing more than 1,400 men in futile attacks yesterday, drove into the Russian trenches in the northwest Caucasus today, but were routed in hard hand-to-hand fighting.

In the Ukraine, the Red army captured an "advantageous"enemy line in a night attack and killed 100 Germans, the Soviet mid-day communique said.

Battling desperately to save their shrinking Caucasian bridgehead as a springboard for summer operations, the Germans brought up fresh reserves from the Crimea and hurled them into new attacks against the Russians in the Kuban area.

The weight of the renewed assault carried into the Russian trenches. The fierceness of the Russian resistance took a heavy toll of the attackers, however, and the survivors were forced to flee back to their original positions, the communique said.

Montgomery Wins Flying Fortress

LONDON —(INS)— An American Flying Fortress — complete with crew—today was British Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's personal airplane because his Eighth army captured Sfax four days before he wagered it would.

The Daily Express, in a dispatch from Sousse, said the plane and crew were turned over to the fighting general Saturday, and told this story:

Two months ago, dining with some unidentified American generals, "Monty" asked them: "What will you give me if I take Sfax by April 15?"

The Americans, believing such a feat impossible, said they would give him anything he wanted.

Montgomery asked for—and got —a Fortress complete with its crew.

But members on both sides were optimistic that a bill, embracing a 20 per cent withholding levy, along with the final compromise points, would be reported to the house this week.

"There is every reason to believe we'll have a bill by Tuesday," said Rep. Knudsen (R) Minn., ranking minority member of the committee after Sunday's extraordinary session

Chairman Doughton (D) N. C., reported "good progress could be expected" and said he still was "very hopeful."

Behind the drive was a blunt warning from Rep. Martin that if no bill is forthcoming by Wednesday, Republicans will start a petition to discharge the ways and means committee from further consideration of the subject.

Once signed by 218 house members—and there were indications that little difficulty would be had in obtaining the signatures—such a petition would jerk pay-as-you-go legislation back to the house floor for another mauling. Martin, however, remained hopeful of agreement. A discharge petition, he indicated, would be a last resort.

Several "new" plans—new in that they were revisions of several of the many proposals previously rejected by the committee—were reported to have been discussed in Sunday's session.

But the heart part of the deliberation still appeared to be the question of partial forgiveness, on which Knudsen reported "we are drawing closer together."

The 50 per cent abatement from the GOP may represent too much forgiveness for the Democrats, who applauded the "principle" arguments of Committee Member Disney (D) Okla., to swallow even in their efforts to reach a compromise.

All evidence indicated that Republicans were in a powerful bargaining position and it was not expected the majority committee members prodded by their leadership, would give up the compromise struggle without making a determined effort to work out a solution likely to be accepted by the house.

LONDON —(U.P.)— The German-controlled Paris and Vichy radios reported today in dispatches from Tangier that the first contingent of Brazilian troops had arrived in Morocco. The Paris broadcast described the landings as "considerable."

Report Keitel Forms Balkan Defense Unit

LONDON—(AP)—The Algiers radio, quoting sources in Istanbul, Turkey, said today Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German high command, had arrived in Sofia, Bulgaria, to organize a unified command in the Balkans of German, Italian and Balkan officers.

The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, said the new command would be entrusted with the defense of the Balkans against any Allied landing attempts.

The same broadcast said new contingents of German elite guards and Gestapo officials had arrived in Austria. Pamphlets, instructing civilians how to behave in the event of an invasion, have been distributed in Greece, it was said.

Join Appeal For Blows At Japan

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Two high ranking members of the senate foreign relations committee—Chairman Tom Connally (D.) Texas, and Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (R.) Michigan — today joined in the appeal for aggressive war against Japan.

At the same time, it was learned that influential senators have privately conferred with high war department officials urging that help be rushed to Gen. Douglas MacArthur to aid in foiling a threatened Japanese invasion of Australia.

"The war in the Pacific demands aggressive and militant action," said Sen. Connally. "It presents difficulties but that is all the more reason for exerting ourselves to the limit to get planes and supplies and men into that theater."

Sen. Vandenberg made his plea for aid for Gen. MacArthur in a letter to Sen. Chandler (D.) Kentucky, congratulating him on a senate speech demanding that America cease regarding the Japanese conflict as "a second-class war."

U. S. Aircraft Carrier Was 'Shangri-La'

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A year after American fliers staged their spectacular raid on Tokyo, the veil of secrecy lifted partly today on "Shangri-la" as censor-cleared dispatches from North Africa disclosed that the U. S. army bombers took off from an aircraft carrier.

Details of the raid were lacking in the stories from North Africa and the war department has never admitted anything beyond the fact that twin-engined Billy Mitchell bombers under the command of Maj. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle carried out the attack.

The first admission from sources controlled by the United States and British censors came in the following International News Service dispatch from London:

"One year ago today Maj. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle and his intrepid band of airmen bombed Tokyo from an undisclosed base referred to by President Roosevelt as 'Shangri-la.'

"Tonight the London Daily Telegraph, in a dispatch from a North African air force base, cleared by the official censor, stated that the raiders took off from an aircraft carrier. The name of the carrier is still a secret.

"Some of the men who took part in the Tokyo raid, it was said, are now in North Africa."

Ever since startled Tokyo radio commentators first flashed to the world the news of the dramatic attack there has been considerable speculation as to the origin of the raid which was described by President Roosevelt as "Shangri-la" a mythical oriental spot in James Hilton's book, "Lost Horizon."

Several times during the past year Tokyo broadcasts speculated on the origin of the raid stating that the bombers took off from one or more aircraft carriers several hundred miles from the shore of Japan.

Japs Say U. S. Rushes Plan For Raid Repeat

NEW YORK — (INS) — United States forces are "feverishly" preparing to bomb Tokyo a second time, the Tokyo radio warned the Japanese people today.

A broadcast, marking the first anniversary of the April 18, 1942, raid on Japanese cities by American airmen led by Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle, was picked up by the Federal Communications Commission.

Said the announcer: "Realizing that she could never win decisive battles on the front lines, the enemy has changed his strategy to an attack on the people of our nation instead."

Accompanying the Mansfield detectives to Canton yesterday were D. C. Lape, city bus driver, and Allen Stoner, driver for the DeLuxe Cab company. Lape was robbed the night of April 11 as he drove his bus on Ausdale avenue, while Stoner reported a passenger held him up and took $20 the preceding night on Prospect street.

Bond told officers yesterday that he threw Lape's billfold into the vestibule of the First Methodist church after taking the money. Police, however, were unable to find the wallet, and they said a pedestrian probably picked it up. The fare box stolen from the bus was recovered.

THREE WARSHIPS LAUNCHED TODAY

KEARNY, N. J. —(INS)— Three new warships today were added to Uncle Sam's rapidly expanding navy following the launching of a destroyer at the Kearny shipyard of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock company and two destroyer-escorts at its Port Newark yard.

Mrs. Walter P. Richardson of New Orleans sponsored the destroyer, Clarence K. Bronson, named in honor of her first husband, the late Lieut. Clarence King Bronson.

The sub-killers Osterhaus and Parks hit the water 10 minutes after the destroyer was launched.

"Old 98," named after the football numerals he made famous.

However, two were reported to have been killed and Harmon, wandering alone in the jungle, found his way back to the plane but was unable to locate those who bailed out with him.

After four days, friendly natives found Harmon and took him to an unidentified inhabited place for a short time to recuperate.

The former All-American football player insisted that he be allowed to go back into the jungle to search for his comrades but he was brought to the hospital while an army expedition went into the jungle searching for other survivors.

Harmon was reported safe by the war department Saturday. He had been missing on a flight over South America since April 8, and on April 14, the war department formally notified his family at Ann Arbor, Mich.

One of football's all-time greats, Harmon played in Michigan's backfield in 1938, 1939 and 1940, setting a new national scoring record and making All-American his last two years.

Look To Little Purchases To Push War Loan Drive To Goal

Industrial and township organizations were moving ahead today with Shelby Cycle company reporting organization of a plant campaign there.

From Washington reports on the national drive for 13 billian dollars show that John Q. Citizen is due for some visits by his local war bond volunteer salesman. The treasury's latest official figures on Friday indicate that Mr. Citizen had bought only $904,000,000 of the 13 billion goal.

This doesn't mean that the drive wasn't going along nicely.

The treasury announced a total of more than 9 billion had been subscribed by Friday night.

But what it apparently meant was the cream had been skimmed off the pool of money which the treasury thinks can and should be invested in war bonds.

This cream, as secretary of the treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., pointed out, was the money from the big investor—generally speaking, a bank, an insurance company, a trust fund, a public institution, and so on.

There still are four billion dollars to go before the drive for 13 billion in April goes over the top. It's the hardest part to get.

"Up to this point, Morgenthau said, "I am sorry to say that our reports do not reflect purchases by the individual buyer of small denomination bonds in an amount as great as we expect and must have."

Since 1919 more than one-third of the British population has been rehoused, mostly in projects financed by the government.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, APRIL 19, 1943.

Success of the War Bond campaign will depend on many small purchases—not on a few large ones.

Tomorrow will be Adolf Hitler's birthday anniversary—remember to buy a War Bond . . . he may not know about it but he will feel its effect.

It's General Marshall's idea that the African battlefront is no place for visiting politicians. It seems that their brand of fighting isn't the kind that's needed to win the war.

Move To Prevent Job-Shifts

EXTENT to which the government's "job freeze" order, as announced by War Manpower Commissioner McNutt, will be effective in preventing shifts from one essential job to another that pays more money depends very largely on the co-operation of employes and employers.

Purpose of the order is obvious and it may be regretted that the slow-motioned machinery of government could not have been made ready for such a move a year or more ago.

Insofar as agricultural workers are concerned, much of the damage which this order seeks to prevent has already been done and farm workers by the thousands have been drained from this vital industry into war jobs which pay fantastically high wages without requirement for special skill.

An oddity in the whole situation is the matter-of-course acceptance of a theory that government can draft men for military service but cannot assign civilians to wartime jobs for which they are best fitted.

Inclination to depart from such belief is seen in Mr. McNutt's reply to the suggestion that American tradition holds that every man has a chance to better himself by going into better-paying work. "I'll answer that in one sentence," Mr. McNutt said, "We've got a war on."

That is the point which still seems to be escaping many people who are inclined to give self-interest first consideration, and which accounts for the slowness with which an all-out war effort is being attained in this country.

Every strike, every individual or group slow-down, and every attempt to gain advantages for organized minorities, evidences lack of appreciation of the enormity of the task of winning the war and failure to realize the vastly greater sacrifices which men in the armed services are being called upon to make.

The INTENT of the "job freeze" order is clear. It is up to the people of America to make it function successfully.

Brazil Proposes Military Action

BRAZIL proposes to send an army to fight in Africa beside the United Nations. It is in part a gesture of friendliness to show that Brazil's heart is in this war.

There may be another reason, however. The peace conference will be apt to listen to countries in proportion to their war effort. And President Vargas of Brazil may have pondered the brilliant stroke of Italy's greatest statesman, Count Camillo di Cavour, who brought about the unification of Italy.

In 1854 England and France entered upon the Crimean war against Russia. Much to everyone's surprise, the little kingdom of Sardinia, which had no quarrel with Russia, sent 18,000 men to aid the allies. Cavour, as Sardinian premier, wanted to win French good will against Austria, which then ruled much of Italy, and at the peace conference to advertise Italy's struggle for unity. He succeeded completely. In three years French troops, fighting side by side with the Sardinians, expelled Austria from much of Northern Italy, and started the process which ended in United Italy.

Brazil has no territorial ambitions. She may, however, desire some economic gains. By actively entering the war she will have taken an important step toward securing them.

Sustained Interest In Civic Music

FREQUENT designation of Mansfield as "a typical American city" comes, in large part, from the wide variety of interests and activities to which the people of this community devote themselves, and the enthusiasm with which various groups set about to accomplish what they start out to do.

A case in point is the success of the Civic Music Association's campaign to list memberships for next season's course, under wartime difficulties which only those who were actively engaged in the enterprise will realize.

Enrollment of more than one thousand members in this organization involved a vast amount of work by many people whose only reward is in the satisfaction of assuring that Mansfielders will have opportunity to enjoy several evenings of fine music in their own city.

However willing the public support of any such enterprise may be, there is need for capable and earnest leadership and direction, and for much hard work by committees, solicitors and other voluntary and unpaid helpers. Mansfield is fortunate in the high percentage of its citizenship that willingly responds when there is a call for performance of public service tasks.

Big Demand for Baby Chicks

THERE'S always a boom in chickens at this time of year, but now it is far bigger than usual. Rise in the price of meat, and difficulty of getting it at any price, drives people to produce their own, and poultry is the simplest and and easiest form.

So commercial hatcheries everywhere are said to be swamped with orders, and suburban residents able to get or save brooding eggs are starting poultry farms in their back yards on an unprecedented scale. Professional hatchers are likely to be sold out for a month or two ahead, and many orders already placed cannot be filled until midsummer.

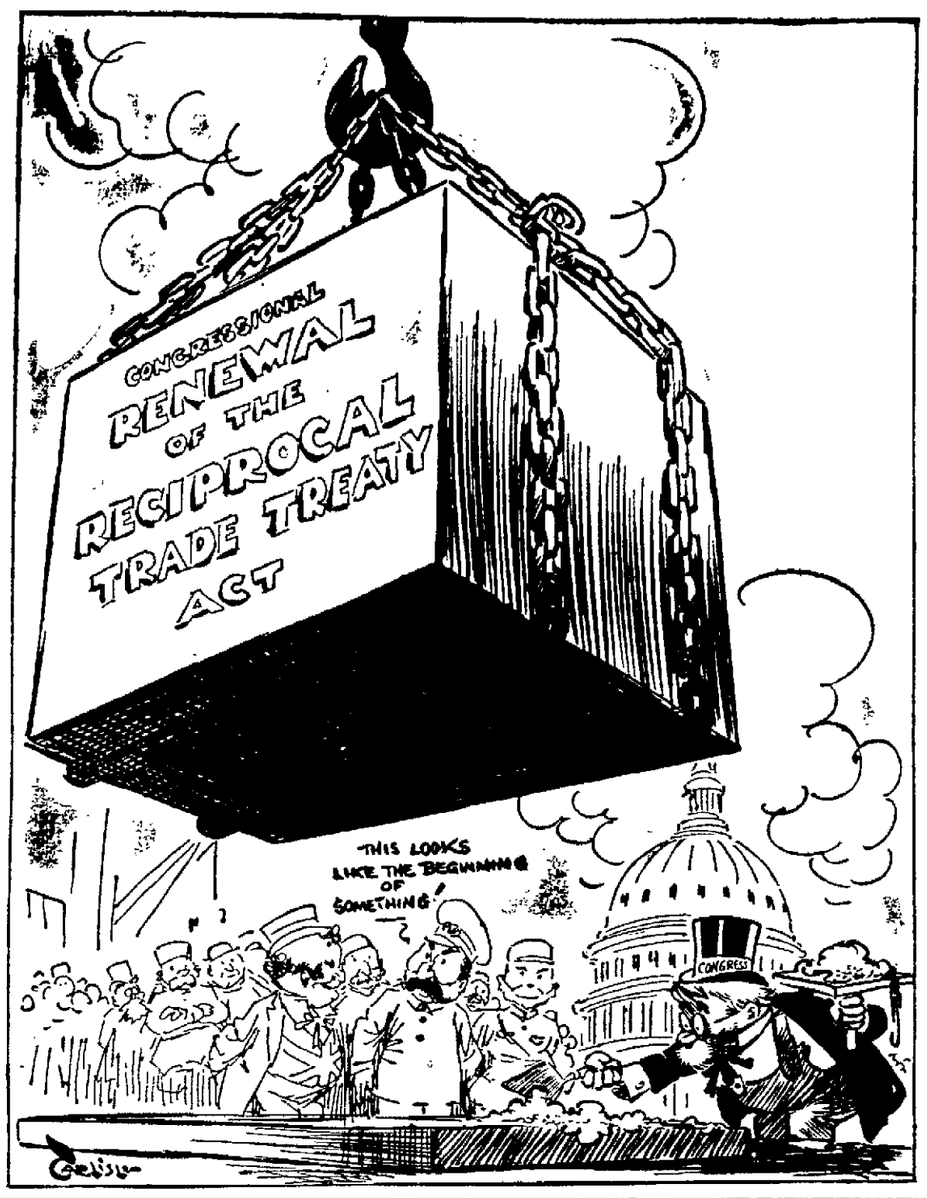
It is a fine thing for those who have yard space for such purposes. And it is something that children as well as adults can find interest and pleasure in doing. Fertile eggs hatch in three weeks. And from then on, life is more interesting and profitable. The main problem is getting the eggs, and a hen willing to tackle the job.

But, like everything else, some study is required in order to succeed in raising poultry and a small beginning is safest procedure for inexperienced enthusiasts.

It is said that Thomas Jefferson never made a public speech—which many would regard as a preferable extreme.

The captain's instructions to "hold that line" indicates that the other team has the ball. How does the score stand?

A CORNERSTONE FOR THE POSTWAR WORLD



War Work for the Handicapped

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Congress has spread on the statutes provisions for taking care of the physically handicapped who will emerge from this war.

Private industry, in some sections, has been doing an excellent job of tapping this potential manpower lode. Some war plants being manned almost entirely by the "lame, halt and blind." According to the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped, Inc., with headquarters here, approximately 92,000 physically handicapped persons have been placed by the War Manpower commission since it opened for business. That sounds swell, but wait.

Paul A. Strachan, president of the federation, and himself deaf, says there are 23,000,000 physically handicapped persons in this country and that a large portion of them are employable. If that is true, the 92,000 figure becomes pretty insignificant and it looks as if the manpower agencies are neglecting one of our best sources in combatting the employment shortages.

* * *

WASHINGTON repeatedly has received stories about factories in which blind persons have become adept "touch" inspectors; in which deaf persons, unperturbed by the noises of heavy industry, have proved highly efficient in operating various machine tools, stampers and welders; and in which the armless and legless have done everything from handling precision instruments to driving trucks, tractors and cranes. Even partial invalids, whose efficiency plays out at the end of four or five hours, have been worked into short shifts.

The only thing that has been done about it so far is the introduction of a joint resolution, sponsored by Senator James J. Davis, Pennsylvania's "Puddler Jim," to make the 1,500 United States Employment Service offices recruiting stations for physically handicapped persons.

Senator Davis, who is not physically handicapped, but who started life here as a Welsh immigrant lad, rose to be secretary of labor, and long has been a champion of the underprivileged.

The law he wants enacted would establish a division for the physically handicapped in every U. S. Employment Service office. These would be headed, where possible, by some person who is handicapped. Without regard to the civil service laws, these divisions would be authorized to employ, fix the compensation of, and otherwise see to the employment of such persons. They would work, of course, with state and local organizations already operating.

National headquarters of the division would make reports every three months to congress to show what progress is being made.

* * *

THE federation and several other organizations are, of course, thumping the drum pretty hard to see that the bill goes through. In view of manpower problems, it is difficult to understand what objections there would be to it—at least for the duration.

However, for some strange reason, there has been a lot of buck-passing here on federal handling of the problem. While some states and smaller organizations have been very active, the federation's figure that only 92,000 have been placed is evidence that little has been accomplished.

Alcoholics Anonymous.

Editor News-Journal:

I would like to let people know of an organization that does much to make homes in which there is an alcoholic problem a better and happier place in which to live.

This organization is called, "Alcoholics Anonymous." All cases are handled anonymously. There are no medicines given except where the person needs hospitalization.

In my case, our home was about to be broken up because of my husband's drinking. It was getting to the point where I hated to leave the house. The children were telling other children of their daddy's drinking escapades. Our bills were piling up.

After one of these drinking spells I finally gave up and went to see about getting a divorce. When I told my husband about my decision, he realized he was at fault and he had to do something about his problem.

He had a friend who also had an alcoholic problem and who had conquered it, so he went to see him. This friend told my husband about "Alcoholic Anonymous."

This happened almost six months ago and my husband hasn't touched alcohol since.

Our home life has improved so much it is almost unbelievable. In less than six months we have paid off most of our bills, have a nicer car, and are all nicer dressed. Now I am proud to go placed with my husband. If we had only known about this organization a long time ago many trials and heartaches would have been avoided.

There are no large fees or dues to pay for this help. One member helps another.

I shall be forever grateful for "Alcoholics Anonymous."

MacArthur's Call for Air Power Regarded as Switch In Attitude

WASHINGTON—Air Force officials in Washington are amazed and delighted with Gen. MacArthur's recent blast about the Japanese threat, and his declaration that air power is necessary to control the sea lanes.

Here is the highly significant background behind their amazement, including reasons for MacArthur's "switch," as the Air Force calls it.

Traditionally MacArthur has cried down the importance of air power. Most people have forgotten it but he was one of the opponents of Billy Mitchell and sat on the court martial which threw him out of the army. But when Lt. Gen. George Kenney was in Washington recently he warned of a change in MacArthur's thinking.

"The maestro has switched," said Kenney—"keep your eye on him."

Even then, Air Force officials were skeptical. Their skepticism vanished, however, when MacArthur publicly declared, that air power rather than naval power was the key to victory in the South Pacific.

* * *

"Another Convert."

WHEN they read this, champions of air power in the war department almost threw their hats in the air and shouted, "Another convert!"

Here is the reason why MacArthur came out with this blast. The Japs, still licking their wounds from naval action, are busily bringing up a force for retaliation. And MacArthur knows that force is not naval, it is air.

MacArthur has reports indicating that the Japanese have constructed a tremendous number of new airfields in the long string of islands reaching down from Japan across the East Indies toward Australia. And they have already used these bases for delivery of a great fleet of airplanes, including fighter planes which before had to be delivered by boat.

Many war department strategists believe the Japs have no plan to invade Australia or even to retake Guadalcanal, but are fearful of American control of the air, and are trying to seize that control through nearby bases.

Possibly the Japs have taken to heart the repeated statement that we do not intend to fight back by an island-to-island campaign, and they suspect us of planning a blow farther north. That is, instead of taking each island in turn and working west and north, we might driven to take Timor or Borneo, cut off the communication lines, and thus shrink the tail of the dragon without having to fight it.

* * *

Eager to Take Offensive.

THAT some such plan is intended might be deduced from the fact that Gen. Kenney, in his recent trip to Washington, was asking for bombers as well as fighters. He was bursting with a desire to go on the war path in a very aggressive way.

Fact is that though we are sending bombers to the South Pacific they don't all get to the Australian area. Admiral Halsey sees them going through, and insists that the danger in his theater demands more bombers. So he takes his cut, and MacArthur gets that many less.

It all adds up to this—the Japs are out to ruin our airfields and planes, to recapture air supremacy. But MacArthur, newly airminded, will put everything he has, or can get, into the air to prevent this. In short, the news from the South Pacific will be news of air battles for a long time to come.

Rubber From Refineries.

IT HAS now been more than a year since far-sighted Oil Coordinator Ickes urged that synthetic rubber be made by converting small oil refineries, closed by gasoline rationing, instead of building the monstrous new rubber factories which will not be finished until 1944 and which require millions of tons of precious steel and copper.

After long delays the first of these converted small refineries will begin making rubber on May 1. It is the Eastern States Petroleum Refinery at Houston, Texas, and the results promise to be astounding.

Not a single new steel vessel, pump, tank, or piece of piping, so badly needed for escort vessels by the navy, have been used. Furthermore, the total new material of other types amounts to only 20 per cent of the cost of the entire job.

However, this Eastern States plant will produce in 12 months enough butadiene to make 2,000,000 tires, plus ingredients for several thousand tons of high octane gasoline per day.

Also, because it was not necessary to build new walls, roofs, equipment, this converted refinery will produce butadiene at a cost equivalent to a little over $1 per tire, based on the investment.

* * *

Big Plants Cost More.

IN CONTRAST, the big new refinery built under the Jesse Jones plan at Lake Charles, La., will made butadiene for 9,000,000 tires but at the rate of $8 per tire on the investment. Moreover, it will not get into production until 1944.

Despite the speed and saving in converting these small refineries, something awfully queer is afoot. Suddenly the conversion program is being cancelled. Last week, conversion of the Atlas Oil company at Shreveport was stopped. Other small refineries may suffer the same fate.

Reason the big oil companies are against the plan is obvious. The small refineries will serve as a cost yardstick to show how cheaply rubber can be produced, compared with the Gargantuas which Jesse Jones' Rubber Reserve is building at tremendous cost all over the country.

SOMEWHERE IN TUNISIA—The men who interrogate captured prisoners have interesting jobs. In addition to being linquists, they have to be good psychologists to wheedle information out of reluctant German soldiers.

They never have any trouble getting the Italians to talk, but unfortunately the Italians don't know anything. According to interrogators they are a pretty sorry lot. Some of them didn't even know they were fighting against Americans till they got captured.

One batch I know of thought we would execute them, and were pathetically happy when they discovered they would live. The first thing they usually ask is to be allowed to write their families that they're all right, and of course permission is granted.

Most of them keep diaries. All of them, Italians and Germans alike, seem to have plenty of money in their pockets. The Italians all carry Catholic medals and crosses, and are grateful on learning they can keep those. Nearly everybody has a picture of a wife or sweetheart or children, and these too they are allowed to keep.

A few of the captured Germans and Italians up north had on thin clothing, and no underwear at all. But most of them are warmly dressed and well equipped. The first thing our soldiers take away from a German is his mess kit. It is superior in quality and design to ours, is made of steel, easy to keep clean, more compact, and even has a can opener with it.

* * *

THE Italians have a shovel that is quite a gadget. It is small, sort of like a fireplace coal shovel. The shovel part is swiveled onto the handle, so that you can turn it down, lock it, and the shovel then becomes a pick.

Italian enlisted men wear as lapel insignia a tin star, exactly like the stars an American general wears. I know at least two generals now wearing these Italian stars on their shoulders. And I heard of a private who pinned one on his cap unthinkingly, and went around for an hour wondering why everybody in the army was suddenly saluting him.

The Italians are almost unanimously happy to be captured, but you never can tell what a German's attitude will be. Some are friendly, and glad to be out of it. Others are arrogant. They tell of one wounded German who came to in the operating room of one of our hospitals, and instantly came off the table swinging with both fists. Nurses say the wounded Germans usually are sullen and autocratic.

There is one conscripted German regiment made up of people rejected earlier in the war—men with one eye or one finger missing, older people, men from occupied countries. But mostly the Germans and Italians both are in excellent physical condition.

The Germans get paid every ten days, and nearly half their money is automatically sent home. They are usually short on cigarets. Often you'll see Americans going past a batch of newly captured prisoners and stopping to give them cigarets.

Stories differ as to how the Axis treats our prisoners. Some of those who have escaped say the Italians are worse than the Germans. I know Americans who say they were treated courteously and considerately and others who say they'll commit suicide before they'll be captured again. I guess it depends on the individual who gets his hands on you.

* * *

DURING the February fighting in Tunisia I unwittingly played the most villainous role it has ever been my misfortune to perform.

Will Lang of Time-Life and I had been traveling together. I left him way up in Ouseltia Valley, and drove back to the southern front. On the way I ducked into a certain headquarters where mail is occasionally sent out to us from the city.

There I found about 15 letters and three cablegrams for Will and Eliot Elisofen, the Life photographer. So I stuck them in my pocket then headed for Sbeitla.

On the way I stopped in Feriana to pick up some stuff we had left at the little hotel there. Lang and Elisofen kept a room at this hotel, to which they returned occasionally.

At first I thought I'd better keep their mail with me. And then I thought no, there'll be hard fighting around Sbeitla, and if anything should happen to me their mail will be gone forever. So I finally dumped it all on their beds in Feriana.

And I'll be damned if the Germans didn't push through that very night and take Feriana, and along with it the Lang and Elisofen mail. I could have cried for remorse. And to top it off, I hadn't even read their cablegrams, so couldn't tell them what they said.

But two guys have never made it easier for a culprit than they did for me. They just laughed it off as though they were accustomed to getting 100 letters a day, and what difference did another 15 make?

How It Started

The "A B C" Nations.

The A B C Nations—they refer, as everybody knows, to our good neighbors to the south of us; but why are they known as the A B C Nations?

Once uttered the reason is obvious.

The original reference was to Argentina, Brazil and Chile.

Subsequently the phrase came to include not only these three, but all the states of South America, Central America and Mexico as well.

A Farmer's Diary — By CALVIN A. BYERS

Our Victory Garden

THE straw stack in our barnyard was rotted down, last summer. At that time the chickens scratched there constantly for worms; even after the ground in other places had frozen, heat from fermenting straw and sufficient moisture made this a pleasant food source for our flock.

Here was a fertile spot, ideal for an earthworm farm. We discarded that possibility, during the winter, in favor of a Victory garden.

This spring deep plowing showed the straw so well decayed that the lower layer, black and porous, seemed like deep rich soil. We planned for potatoes here as soon as the weather would permit the planting. The ground was fitted and furrowed, ready to drop the seed.

Then it rained, snowed an inch or two, and froze. When the scored-out patch was thawed again, a new crop of worms came to the surface. The busy hens scratched out the furrows.

We waited, for planting, until the ground should warm up. Meanwhile, I left the sunshine on the seed, so it would not rot so easily. Large, fresh-cut parts will not endure cold wet soil—even if the sign is right.

The patch will not be large. We shall depend upon hand dusting to control the pests. Besides, quails will visit here, to eat the hard shell bugs, as well as the caches of eggs on the underside of the leaf, or the larvae that ravenously destroy the tender foliage. The ground sparrow, the wren and the goldfinch family will catch the leaf hopper whose injuries may start the fatal blight. The female lightning bugs—not blest with wings—will enjoy the tasty morsels of the slimy sail. Even the flock of hens will aid in devouring luscious grasshoppers and leaf hoppers.

We have planted lettuce, onions, strawberries and peas, so far, in the other garden east of the house where the plum orchard and the vineyard stand proudly in the brown, freshly cultivated soil. Between the rows of trees and vines, there is space for planted seeds to grow. A newly added triangle of sod at the lower edge, near the stream, makes our Victory garden space total nearly an acre.

GHOST OF MY LOVE +

CHAPTER VXI

When Rosemary left her husband in Option, she knew that she had failed at every turn.

"I couldn't bluff or coerce him," she cried to herself, "and instead I let him get the best of me!"

All of her dealings with this man had been naive, she realized, since the hour they first met. She had been too credulous, too trusting. His swift proclamation of "love" for her that first night had been a romantic thunderbolt. She had been fatigued from overwork, and starved for relaxation and laughter. Under bright lights in gay company he had been a dream man; until, like so many careless dreams, this one had turned ugly on her hands. Married? To a man as detestable as Harry Boyle? She could hardly believe that fact, even now. What in God's name had allowed her to do it! She had never lived with him, even one minute. That fact alone enabled her to keep self-respect and pride.

* * *

Today on the way to Option she had bravely planned something, but her act hadn't jelled. It had been a vague two-way plan—in a desperate hope of aiding Bill St. Clair. Boyle had seen through her every maneuver and had dared to tempt her and threaten her bodily in turn. If she could only go to police or federal authorities with what he had told her today! But then—he actually was her husband. He knew full well she wouldn't expose him, because that would instantly throw suspicion on her, and through her on Bill.

On the way back to the quaint old ghost town of Lightning, Rosemary tried to reason everything out carefully. She couldn't. Harry Boyle's mind was too devious and shrewd. But she sensed that he would lay his plan with Nazi thoroughness and spring his blitz on her and Little Boss when they were least prepared.

Little Boss was apparently hard at work when she got back to the office in Uncle Pete's hotel. He scarcely spoke. This surprised her, but she was glad of it. Because of her unexplained trip to Option, he could have asked her embarrassing things.

For 24 hours more he was stand-offish. Every bit of their conversation was about work. They had brought in two middle-aged women from Option, plus the Indian cook Uncle Pete hired for all of them. The white women were trained draftsmen and office help—workers who in peace time would have been men. All told, the personnel now numbered six here in the strange ghost town.

* * *

On the next morning a motorcycle courier came out from Option to tell Bill that machinery was being unloaded on a railroad siding there. Power scrapers, tractors, bulldozers, trucks, fence wire, all manner of essentials were included, except of course the bulk of building materials itself. This Bill was supposed to buy locally, and would have done so except that Harry Boyle cornered it weeks ago. Arrival of this machinery distressed Bill more than ever.

"What am I to do, Rosemary?" he came to her in despair. "Washington has routed this stuff here and dumped it on my hands! Long cars of it, practically a trainload."

"Little Boss, you must—" she stopped, beholding his frown of worry.

"The whole project is two weeks behind already. All we've done is complete the surveys and most of the paper work. There lies the field," he pointed dramatically out a window at the airport site two miles down the canyon on the open valley, "and not one stone has been turned!"

"No."

"Now here's a trainload of equipment. Washington assumes that I've already got a mountain of lumber and bricks moved to the scene. They'll be sending in a crew of workmen any hour!"

"But Bill—couldn't you—" she was a little desperate now, "perhaps you could telephone Washington, yourself. Explain that—"

"They've beat me to it. I've already had a long telegram . . . Here." He fumbled in his pocket and stuck the yellow paper at her. Rosemary read:

LUNCH WITH YOUR FATHER TODAY DISCUSSING NEW PROJECT THERE. SORRY YOU WERE NOT WITH US. HAVE EVERY CONFIDENCE IN YOU. NATION IS DEPENDING ON YOU TO RUSH THIS THROUGH AHEAD OF SCHEDULE. BELIEVE YOU CAN DO IT. BELIEVE IT SO FIRMLY THAT WE ARE ADVANCING DATE OF PERSONNEL ARRIVAL AND MAY ASK YOU TO DOUBLE CAPACITY OF CLASSROOMS FOR CADETS AND TRAINEES. BEST PERSONAL REGARDS.

MALCOLM ALLEN, U. S. A.

"Mmmmmm!" Rosemary was awed. "Bill-l-l-l!"

"Exactly! That's what I meant. The big chief himself is assuming—assuming, mind you—that everything is jake out here. So is Dad. So is—confound it—the nation itself." He said that a little angrily. Then he added, "But I guess it really is important, at that."

"It is, Bill. Oh it is! I know it and you know it. Ahead of schedule, he says. Bill we—if America can—can rush every war effort ahead of schedule—every effort everywhere—the sorrow and the suffering and the pain will end just that much sooner for people all over the world!"

* * *

They were silent, then. For a long moment he stared grimly down the haze of Purple Canyon at the airfield site. She had never seen distress on any man. She knew he had been frustrated at every turn. She knew, too, that he held Harry Boyle to blame for it; and that a man as desperate as Bill was getting, could go out and do tragic things.

"There's no point," said he, softly now, and bitterly, "in letting them unload that train of machinery. This whole project may have to be abandoned, or at least moved to another state and location. So, in the interest of saving time, I'm going to—"

"Bill! You're going in to Option and unload that train at once!"

"But what can I do with it?"

"Get the machinery on the field. Put it to work scraping, leveling, building runways, everything it can. Make a big show, Bill! Get a lot of work going! And—and don't expect me here much for a few days. I'll have to be doing some outside things, myself!"

Ohio Sheep Help In Treatment Of Soldiers' Wounds

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The health of Ohio sheep may be a factor in the rate of recovery of wounded American soldiers, according to L. C. Bear, animal husbandry specialist at Ohio State university.

The army medical staff has made an appeal for more and better surgical catgut, Bear says, and catgut, which really is obtained from the intestines of sheep, is satisfactory for manufacture of surgical sutures only if the intestines were not damaged by internal parasites while the sheep was alive.

Injuries caused by the nodular form are the most destructive to suture material, he explains, adding that these sheep parasites can be controlled by drenching the animals with a solution of phenothiazine before they are turned on pasture. He recommends one ounce of phenothiazine in milk or in molasses and water for sheep, and one-half ounce of the preparation for lambs. Infested sheep, he points out, will contaminate pasture fields unless control measures are used before the pasture season starts.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"He may be here at any minute," I told Hal Meredith, and the words were scarcely out of my mouth before I heard my father's knock, and we all came to our feet

"I'll go back into the bedroom," Katharine said hurriedly. "I—I cannot listen to the retelling of that story, and of course your father must hear it Equally of course, if later your father wishes to talk to me, I will come back."

"I probably shall be with you," I told her, and she went into the bedroom

I made sure it was my father before opening the door, then admitted him

"We have a caller Father, with important news," I said Then he recognized Hal and greeted him warmly

"I'll go into the next room with Katharine while Hal tells you the story we have just heard," I said "We all agree that you should know every detail of it, and that you will know just what to do"

Suspicions Revived.

In the bedroom I found Katharine ranging up and down, her fingers clenched her face pallid with anger her eyes stormy

"The 'wildness woman' in action!" she exclaimed and from that bitter gibe I realized how the thought of Jack's long association with Ruth Hayes had made her sub-consciously suspicious again of his reasons for keeping himself away from her

I firmly grasped her arms and swung her around facing me

"This doesn't get you anywhere dear girl, I said "You knew long ago that Ruth Hayes is capable of any infamy, and now she cannot wreak any real harm on either you or Jack."

She stared at me with hard, angry eyes

"What do you call this last performance?" she asked "Won't that be real harm if she carries out her threat? I thought your father was having her trailed?"

"He is," I said calmly, "and there is about as much chance of her carrying out that blackmailing threat as of your carrying the torch for Steve Redfield"

I was ashamed of the vulgar quip, but did not regret it when I saw the anger die out of Katharine's eyes and heard her grudging laugh.

"You ought to be shot at sunrise for a speech like that," she said. "However, you do know how to ease the knots in binding ropes "But honestly, Madge, sometimes I yearn to flail that woman to a pulp"

"You'd be crippling your good right arm for nothing," I told her. "Now sit down and relax, if you can, until Father sends for us."

But when his knock sounded it was not to summon us, but to herald his own entrance.

More Work for Madge.

"I have heard everything Hal has to tell," he said abruptly, "and he knows exactly what he has to do tomorrow when that woman comes back for her answer. He is ready to leave now, and if you will go in and send him away, Katharine, you will do me a favor. I must consult with Margaret immediately."

He did not look at Katharine as he voiced this flimsy pretext but Katharine's face was crimson as she went toward the door, and I knew that she surmised, as I did, that Hal himself had made a request that Katharine come back to say good-bye to him

But my father neither confirmed nor denied this conjecture As soon as she was gone, he knocked on the camouflaged door that led to the adjoining suite, and when Adams came to the door he beckoned him through it.

"Come in," he said. "I have important work for you."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

KNOW THE REVOKE LAWS

You can prevent a lot of arguments at the table if you become known as one with positive knowledge of the new laws. None of these is more important than the new method of dealing with revokes There are five main changes in it, as follows:

1 Your first revoke in any particular suit costs you two tricks, as before, but additional revokes by you in the same suit cost no additional penalty.

2. If your revoke costs the other side more tricks than the two-trick penalty, the additional tricks must be restored to it, by agreement of the players, so that the innocent parties are not punished by your revoke.

3 The dummy now has the right to question any player as to whether his play constitutes a revoke

4 The declarer is no longer prevented from withdrawing his revoke card and substituting one of the correct suit if the dummy questions him after having intentionally seen one or more cards in some other player's hand.

5 The declarer does not incur the penalty for an established revoke if, when correcting a lead out of turn from the dummy, he fails to lead the same suit from his own hand unless he was specifically required to do so or questioned as to a revoke.

Those changes should not be particularly hard to learn, especially since they are all in line with common sense and fairness. If you bear them clearly in mind, you can settle many a discussion at the table which otherwise might become acrimonious. In case you have trouble memorizing such things, we suggest you keep a note of the changes, or a clipping of this item, for occasional reference, until the changes are fixed in your mind. Thus you can render your fellow players a real service.
